One A-Bomb Could Cripple Washington; AEC Advises Dispersal of U. S. Agencies

100,000 Kin Of GIs Here May Lose Medical Care

Proposals Made By Two Agencies Draw Heavy Fire From Pentagon

By John G. Norris
Post Reporter

Free medical and cut-rate hospital care for the families of military personnel—now enjoyed by some 100,000 such dependents in the Washington area—may be eliminated or curtailed.

This was disclosed last night by a Department of Defense announcement that revealed proposals along these lines had been raised independently by two potent Government agencies.

Defense Secretary Louis Johnson's management committee, it was said, has had "the question of free medical care for dependents of military personnel under examination" as part of its economy program.

At the same time, Director Frank Pace of the Bureau of Budget wrote Johnson urging abolition of free medical and cheap hospital treatment for dependents in light of the pay increase just voted to the armed services.

Opposed at Pentagon

Opposition to the proposals immediately was voiced by a top level board at the Pentagon.

"The Personnel Policy Board," said the announcement, "has opposed the elimination of free medical care for dependents primarily because of the possible adverse effect of such action on the morale in the armed forces."

The Defense Department statement said its management committee—better known as the McNarney Economy Board—has had a "task force" working on the problem for some time. No decision will be made in the matter until this study is completed, it was said.

Estimates of the total number of military dependents receiving some medical benefits ran over two million persons. A departmental spokesman said its statisticians figure on an average of 1½ dependents for the 1,583,900 officers and men in uniform.

May Affect 900,000

The Hoover commission last summer estimated that about 900,000 Army and Air Force dependents were eligible for or receiving substantially free medical care.

Officials were not certain last night as to what action would be necessary to curtail or eliminate the medical benefits, if such is the decision. Medical care for Navy dependents is clearly authorized by law, but that for the Army and Air Force is based on an old statute which is less specific.

Dr. Richard Meiling, director of medical services for the armed forces, also was asked for a rec-

Nearly 1000 Dead, 85,000 Homes Lost In Indian Cyclone

New Delhi, India, Nov. 16 (U.P.).—The government announced today that nearly 1000 persons were killed October 27 by a cyclone which lashed the fertile coast of southeastern India.

Earlier, a government spokesman had said that "thousands of men and women were drowned, tens of thousands of cattle were swept away and innumerable houses collapsed" in the storm.

Mediation Ends

Ching Leaves Coal Dispute To Truman

By Sam Stavisky
Post Reporter

Federal Conciliation Chief Cyrus S. Ching yesterday dropped the management-union coal dispute into the President's lap.

Ching conferred with John R. Steelman, the President's assistant and adviser on labor matters, and on leaving the White House told newsmen that further mediation efforts would be "fruitless."

The director of the Federal Mediation and Conciliation Service said he was convinced that John L. Lewis and the mine operators are "further apart" than they were last spring, when they first began discussing a new contract.

"From my talks with the operators, it seems to me they are more solid in their position than ever before," Ching said. Renewed attempts at mediation, Ching added,

Reds Break Word, Truman Hints to Shah

President, Thousands Join in Welcoming Young Iran Ruler

Speaking at a state dinner last night in honor of the newly arrived Shah of Iran, President Truman by inference labeled the Soviet Union as "a great power that does not believe in keeping its contracts."

The dinner at the Carlton Hotel followed by only a few hours the arrival of the youthful Shah at National Airport for a 28-day visit in this country.

Before offering a champagne toast to his Imperial Majesty, Mohammed Reza Shah Pahlavi, Mr. Truman remarked that America always has been friendly with Iran—"this country about which Daniel said, 'The laws of the Medes and Persians, they are not altered.'"

Upholds Iranian Honesty

The Chief Executive then added that "the Medes and the Persians believed in keeping their contracts."

"We have been dealing with a great power that does not believe in keeping its contracts," he continued. "Iran believes in keeping its contracts. The United States believes in keeping its contracts.

"When we make a treaty it is not a scrap of paper. It is an agreement which we expect to carry out."

Mr. Truman told the assembled guests—Cabinet members, their wives, prominent members of Congress, members of the Shah's entourage and representatives of the Iranian Embassy—that he had discussed a "Fair Deal" for Iran with the Shah.

Praises Wartime Help

"It sounds like my St. Paul speech," the President said. He was referring to a recent address in St. Paul in which he vigorously championed his foreign and domestic programs.

Mr. Truman told the Shah that in the assembled guests he was "now looking at the people who make the clock tick in the United States."

The President also praised Iran's wartime collaboration with the Allies.

"Had not Iran opened its gates," he said, "and given us the op-

ATOMIC BOMB TARGET AREAS—Aerial view of Washington made from a Navy plane at 48,846 feet has been diagrammed to show what AEC experts described as three "obvious" aiming points of possible enemy atom bomb-carrying planes over the Capital. They are the Pentagon, a spot between the Capitol building and Union Station and a spot in the White House-State Department area. The outer circle indicates the distance 8000 feet from the zero point in which brick-wall dwellings would be crushed by the blasts; the second circle indicates the distance 5000 feet from the zero point where steel mill-type buildings would be damaged; and the inner circle indicates 2500 feet where steel and reinforced concrete buildings would be reduced

McCloy Gets Full Backing Of Acheson

By Ferdinand Kuhn
Post Reporter

Secretary Acheson went to unusual lengths yesterday to back up the authority of John J. McCloy, the American High Commissioner in Germany.

At his first press conference since returning from Europe, Acheson praised McCloy, and said all three high commissioners now had a full understanding of their governments' position on German problems. He firmly refused to tell the press what the position was, explaining that the news would have to come later from McCloy in Germany.

The Secretary seemed anxious not to complicate McCloy's task by a single word that might upset the coming allied talks with the Germans.

Dr. Donald Adenauer, Chancellor of the new west German republic, gave a full German version of the Paris decisions to his Parliament at Bonn on Tuesday, after long talks with Acheson over the weekend. Foreign Secretary Bevin of Great Britain is expected to give the British version to Parlia-

An accurate drop of one atomic bomb, no more powerful than that used on Nagasaki, would finish off Washington as a useful city or seat of national government.

This is the finding, official and scientific, of what can be taken as the best authorities on the subject, the staff of the Atomic Energy Commission. It is contained in the first official governmental report ever made on the effects of a bomb on an American city.

The AEC stated that an adequate radar warning system and adequate shelters, if used, would minimize casualties. But every building, no matter how well constructed, within a radius of 2500 feet from the point of the burst would be made unusable. And fires would devastate an area of many square miles.

The AEC report, unclassified and bearing the recent date of November 4, was sent to the National Security Resources Board, which has primary responsibility in the Government for civilian defense. It was also circulated widely among Federal agencies, including the military, the Departments of Treasury and Justice and several interdepartmental committees.

The conclusion is that dispersal of Federal agencies—possibly around the outskirts of Washington, with at least two miles separating one department from the other—is the only effective answer to a threat of atomic attack.

This would mean that a single bomb would destroy only one department headquarters. Furthermore, and more important, the dispersal would reduce the attractiveness of Washington as a target, so that the enemy would be likely to pick another objective for his A-bombs.

In attacking an urban center such as the National Capital, the AEC report stated, an enemy would probably use the same method as that employed by the United States on Nagasaki and Hiroshima.

This was a bomb bursting from 1800 to 1970 feet above ground. Such a bomb "would devastate a larger area on the surface of the ground," the report said, than one

Taylor Hits Playing Down Of War Trials

Attempts to "play down" the German war crimes trials are weakening efforts to rebuild the Reich along democratic lines, the Neurnberg chief prosecutor held yesterday.

Brig. Gen. Telford Taylor, New York attorney who served as chief counsel for the American military trials, also warned in his final report to Secretary of the Army Gordon Gray that there is "an alarming resurgence of authoritarianism" in Germany.

He made the following four recommendations to prevent a "second round of Nuernberg trials:"

1. The trying of additional major Nazis in German courts—on criminal rather than denazification charges.

2. Publication and widespread circulation of the Nuernberg trial record in Germany to give Reich liberals "ammunition" to combat Nazi resurgence.

3. Initiation of a "planned effort" by American occupation authorities to press home the lessons of Nuernberg and democratize

B-29 Down In Atlantic Off Bermuda

Hamilton, Bermuda, Nov. 16 (U.P.).—A United States Air Force B-29 Superfortress with 20 men aboard went down in the Atlantic off Bermuda today and tonight planes ranged the ocean in search of survivors.

The search was described as the largest ocean quest in peacetime history. The plane's exact location when it hit the water was believed to be within a 150-mile radius of Bermuda. The pilot last reported he was preparing to ditch the plane because its fuel was exhausted.

The Superfortress was on its way from March Field Air Base, Riverside, Calif., to England and was nearing the end of a 3500-mile nonstop flight from California to Bermuda.

The Superfortress, carrying a crew of 11 and a ground crew of 9, was equipped with two rubber life rafts and "Mae West" life jackets for all aboard.

D. C. Man, 38, Shot to Death In Vermont

Nurse Also Slain; Her Husband Held In Alleged 'Triangle'

Bridgewater, Vt., Nov. 16. (AP).—Two persons were shot to death early today and a man wounded in what police said was "an attempt to break up a triangle."

Dead are Mrs. Antonia Salois, 46, a registered nurse, and her patient, Randolph Ogilby, 38, of Washington, D. C.

The wounded man, shot in the wrist and leg, is Lloyd Bramhall, 51, in whose home police said Mrs. Salois was a roomer. Bramhall was taken to Rutland Hospital where his condition was described as "good."

Sheriff Melvin Moore said Mrs. Salois' husband, Antonio, 45, had been taken into custody in connection with the shootings.

Found in Car

Mrs. Salois and Ogilby were found slain in her car on a lonely woodland road about a quarter of a mile from the Bramhall home. Bramhall was wounded at his home.

According to Sheriff Moore, the woman was caring for Ogilby, described as mentally deficient.

(Charles Fitz Randolph Ogilby of 1870 Wyoming ave. nw., a Washington lawyer, last night identified Randolph Ogilby as "my eldest son" but declined further comment. The shooting victim was the brother of Remsen B. Ogilby 2d, also a lawyer, and a nephew of Remsen B. Ogilby, a former president of Trinity College, Hartford, Conn.—Editor's Note.)

Moore said Mrs. Salois apparently was driving along the one-lane road when another car came from the opposite direction. He said the driver of the second machine got out, walked to the side of Mrs. Salois' car and shot the pair with a .45-caliber automatic pistol.

Woman Calls Sheriff

A short time later, according to Moore, the man went to Bramhall's home and shot him.

First word of the double slaying was received by the sheriff's wife.

Sheriff Moore said the shootings apparently were done in "an attempt to break up a triangle." He did not say who were involved in the triangle or give any further details.

D. C. Airport Is Closed To All Planes Of War Type

CAA Order Excludes Craft Such as P-38; 'Near Miss' Disputed By Navy, Airline Pilot

By Richard Morris
Post Reporter

The Civil Aeronautics Administration yesterday banned all combat-type aircraft from the National Airport.

Meanwhile the Navy and an Eastern Air Lines pilot disputed an alleged "near miss" between two planes south of Washington.

D. W. Rentzel, CAA administrator, announced that all combat-type aircraft will be prohibited from using the airport "because of increasing congestion."

Rentzel said identical letters were sent to Maj. Gen. Laurence Kuter, commanding general of Military Air Transport Service, and Vice Admiral C. T. Durgin, deputy chief of Naval Operations for Air.

The restriction will not apply to military aircraft in a "strictly transport category," Rentzel said.

Thus a converted P-38, such as that flown by Erick Rios Bridoux in the midair collision with an Eastern Air Lines DC-4 November 1, would be banned.

The CAA order specifically excludes from National Airport "not only service planes, but military type aircraft that have been certificated by the CAA for operation in a civil capacity."

An Air Force spokesman said that such aircraft converted to civilian use cannot land at Anacostia Naval Air Station, Bolling or Andrews Air Force bases, without permission from the Air Force or Navy. This permission is granted only "for the convenience and purpose of the Government," the official said.

The military transport category exempted from the order includes such planes as President Truman's personal ship, the Independence, which arrived at the airport with the Shah of Iran just before the order went out.

Another plane exempted from the ban is the converted B-17 based at Bolling Air Force Base in which Vice President Alben W. Barkley makes frequent trips. The CAA is investigating a "near miss" that Barkley's plane reportedly had a week ago with an advertising blimp near National Airport.

Snow Moves East But Is Unlikely To Strike District

The first serious snow of the season — which touched down lightly yesterday in the Midwest, then blanketed Buffalo, N. Y., is headed for the East but won't get any closer than 75 to 80 miles west of Washington, the Weather Bureau forecast here last night.

Senators to Pay Dime for Coffee; 2d Cup Not Free

By The Associated Press

The price of coffee in the Senate lunchroom went up 100 percent yesterday—from 5 to 10 cents a cup.

A second cup will cost only a nickel, the same as heretofore.

In the Senate dining room, a more stately place where many Senators take their meals, the price of coffee a la carte remains 10 cents a cup. But a refill, for which previously there had been no charge, now will cost 10 cents.

East-West 'Common Ground' Exists, Vishinsky Tells U. N.

Lake Success, N. Y., Nov. 16 (U.P.).—Britain warned Russia in the United Nations today that "time for an understanding" is running out, and Russia replied quickly that "common ground" for East-West cooperation can be found.

British Minister of State Hector McNeil, charging the Kremlin with an "attempt to murder peace," said "the danger of accidental war will never be absent" unless Russia lifts the iron curtain.

He said the West may have to cut relations with Moscow "to a minimum."

This brought an unusually mild reply from Soviet Foreign Minister Andrei Y. Vishinsky, who insisted that the capitalist West and the Communist East could find a way to cooperate.

Vishinsky ran through his customary bill of charges against the West—that it is plotting aggression against Russia; that it needlessly atom-bombed Japanese civilians at Hiroshima; that it is in league with the "renegade" Marshal Tito. But his tone lacked the familiar venom and observers agreed the speech was one of conciliation.

The Soviet oratorical genius went so far as to call the United States "a great, mighty and learned country." But he added that the United States "represents a conception of the Old World and its science is lagging."

The debate took place as the General Assembly's main Political Committee pressed forward its

'All Possible' Steps Taken To Free Ward, Acheson Says

Bevin Rejects Hurry In Action by Britain

London, Nov. 16 (AP).—Foreign Secretary Bevin told Parliament today "I am more concerned in acting together with the Commonwealth and other friendly governments" rather than taking a hasty decision on recognizing Red China.

He said the Communist Peiping regime still is ignoring his request for day-to-day working relations. He agreed with a leftist Laborite member of Parliament, Ronald Chamberlain, that Chinese Nationalist attacks on British ships had swept away "whatever remaining shreds there may have been for retaining recognition of the Nationalist Government," but added that Britain still has not decided on linking up diplomatically with the Communists.

Bevin said the British government "considers it is entitled to give able protection to British merchantmen outside Chinese territorial waters

Will Not Even Think Of Recognition Now

The United States will not even think about recognizing Communist China until Angus Ward is freed, Secretary Acheson said yesterday.

Ward, the American consul general in Communist-held Mukden, has been under arrest with four of his consulate employes since October 24, and American officials here have been at their wits' end to know what to do about it.

Acheson told a news conference that the Government here was doing everything it could, and was considering all possible steps to get Ward released. He said he regarded Ward's detention as utterly unwarranted and as a very serious matter.

Acheson said he had discussed the China problem with Foreign Secretary Ernest Bevin in Paris

Luncheon, Meeting to Feature Final Week of Chest Drive

The Community Chest's campaign goes into its final week today, featured by the third general report luncheon in the afternoon followed by a "top strategy" meeting of the 30-member campaign committee.

The campaign committee session was called by General Chairman Frank J. Luchs to "analyze a slowdown" of drive reports.

With November 24 the scheduled final date of the campaign, Chest officials yesterday said they hoped the special meeting would result in a "resumption of momentum."

The drive has reached 63.49 percent—$2,534,501— of its $3,991,719 goal. The total is expected to be increased substantially at today's report luncheon, at 12:20 p. m. in the Washington Hotel.

Guests at the luncheon will be representatives of the District's newspapers and radio and television stations. City and managing editors of each paper, plus station managers and program directors of the stations have been invited.

The luncheon today will be preceded by a parade to highlight the services of Red Feather agencies. The line of march will form at 11:30 a. m. on the west side of 12th st. and Constitution ave. nw., and go north on 12th to F st., and west on F to the hotel.

The last week of the drive will feature two other important meetings—the final general report luncheon on November 24, and a preliminary general report meeting next Monday at which all units in the drive will meet separately.

Sen. Johnson Urges Maryland Airport

Construction of a spacious "international airport" in Maryland about 10 or 15 miles from Washington as a "permanent solution" of National Airport congestion was urged yesterday by Senator Edwin C. Johnson (D., Colo.).

Johnson, chairman of the Senate Interstate Commerce committee having legislative jurisdiction over airlane transportation, said he is pressing for a CAA and Budget Bureau clearance of the project.

Johnson introduced a bill for another District airport last January, before the series of near misses leading up to and following the fatal November 1 crash of a Bolivian piloted P-38 and an Eastern Airlines DC-4.

Wants It to Be Large

He told The Post last night that all of the facts brought out in the resulting CAB inquiry tend to support his conclusion that a new airport for commercial planes "10 or 15 miles in the opposite direction" from Washington is the only permanent answer.

"Washington needs the largest and finest public airport in the country, completely free of any possible interference from military planes," said Johnson.

"It ought to be a big one, with runways at least two miles long, and facilities sufficient to permit two or three big commercial airliners to land at the same time.

"National Airport, with its crisscrossed runways and close proximity to the Bolling Air Force Base and Anacostia Naval Air Station, can never be made big enough to relieve the congestion."

Favors Exclusive Highway

Johnson proposed that a speed highway to the new airport be constructed, to be used exclusively for airport traffic.

Johnson pressed the CAA yesterday for a report on his bill but said he was informed the Budget Bureau has not yet approved it.

Johnson said he differed with Senate Owen Brewster (R., Me.), who proposed Monday that all military flying be done from Andrews Field.

The "obvious solution," he said, is to leave the local military air bases where they are and find an unobstructed site for the commercial field.

He said it may be that private planes and some transport planes could continue to use National Airport after the shift.

Johnson said he will wait for a CAB report on the November 1 P-38-DC-4 crash before deciding whether his Senate committee should investigate further.

Mother Leaves Suicide Gun, Life Code to Son

Chicago, Nov. 16 (U.P.).—Before she shot and killed herself with a new rifle, a socially-prominent concert violinist wrote notes bequeathing the death weapon and a way of life to her son.

Mrs. Wells

To her divorced husband, manufacturer Stephenson Wells, Mrs. Kate Merrell Wells wrote:

"Please see that the rifle is cleaned as soon as possible, since it will be Lynn's.

"It's new and beautifully accurate," she continued. "Some day he will get a lot of pleasure out of it."

To Lynn, 10-year-old son who found her body in their suburban Evanston home Monday, the 29-year-old former violinist wrote motherly advice on how to live.

Body Found by Son

The note was read yesterday at a coroner's inquest, which ended in a verdict of "suicide while temporarily insane." It said in part:

"These are the things I want you to do always:

"When there is a job to do, do a good job. Never a sloppy one . . .

"Be active in your hands and mind, but find plenty of time to observe how beautiful and strange the world is . . .

"Never live too far a ay from outdoors. From trees and birds, animals and plants and insects, mountains and blue water.

"Don't load yourself down with too many things.. Have only such property as you really love and use. Have those few things as fine as possible, and then cherish them and care for them lovingly . . .

"Never make excuses for yourself. Own up to your mistakes, and don't repeat them if you can help it.

"Think for yourself. Don't believe what you read, or what other people say, unless it seems true to you.

"Make plenty of friends. But learn to enjoy being alone too. Don't ever count on anyone but yourself . . .

Love Daddy and Betty (Well's second wife). Don't kid yourself about people, or the way they act. Don't let them push you around. But be just and loyal to your friends. Live simply, but have plenty of fun along the way.

The typewritten note ended with this scribbled line:

Law Urged to Control Labor "Monopolies"

New York, Nov. 16 (AP).—Charles M. White, president of the Republic Steel Corp., tonight called for a Federal law to control what he termed labor monopolies.

"We cannot accept the hazard of labor power being pyramided so that a handful of men, more interested in their own power than in the welfare of the country, can throw our Nation into an economic shambles," he said.

White's statements were made in an address prepared for the 171st dinner of the Economic Club of New York.

CAA Closes National Airport To Combat-Type Airplanes was disclosed, J. B. Hartranft, jr., president of the Aircraft Owners and Pilots Association said his group would protest the action.

The association is sending word of the new order to its membership, Hartranft said.

Once Flew Bridoux's P-38

As the CAA announced the order, the Navy disclosed that EAL Pilot Hasson Calloway had flown "as near the center of the Dahlgren Proving Ground danger area as he could" on a flight to New York Tuesday.

Captain Calloway figured in investigation of the November 1 air disaster that killed 55 persons when he was identified as the pilot of Bridoux's P-38 in the 1946 Bendix Trophy Race from Los Angeles to Cleveland.

He reported by radio to the CAA traffic control center at 2:14 p. m. Tuesday that he had a "near-miss" with a 'military Beechcraft" over Doncaster, Md., east of Quantico, Va. Calloway said he was the pilot of EAL flight 568 non-stop from Richmond, Va., to Newark, N. J. airport.

Navy Lodges Complaint

The Navy Department then issued this account of the incident given by Lieut. Raymond L. Klassy, pilot of a Dahlgren-based SNB (Navy designation of the Air Force's C-45 Beechcraft), in a verbal complaint lodged with the CAA:

The SNB was flying between 8000 and 9000 feet over the Dahlgren "danger area," where Navy guns are fired at high altitudes intermittently, between 2 and 2:15 p. m. when the pilot spotted a DC-3 transport.

Klassy was making practice bombing runs with 100-pound "water fillable" bombs, an authorized training flight for bombardiers.

Number Identified

He flew down to about 8000 feet to identify the airliner. Klassy reported the registry number as N-45369, which was confirmed by EAL as the number of the plane flown by Calloway.

"The EAL plane was headed due north as close to the center of the danger area as he could come," Klassy reported.

The Navy pilot said the DC-3 was 14 miles from the center and nine miles from the eastern edge of the nearest "authorized airway" to the west. This airway is on a 29-degree heading to the northeast into Washington National Airport.

The Navy said commercial aircraft are excluded "at all times" from the danger area, which has been "officially established and published on aeronautical charts for years."

Used For Bomber Runs

The report said no firing was being conducted over that particular point at the time, although it was in use for runs over a "high altitude bombing target."

Calloway reported the incident from Doncaster, a standard "reporting point" for commercial aircraft on the airway into Washington and outside of the Dahlgren danger area.

Klassy said he saw the DC-3 pass over a point "about 2 or 3 miles east of the Dahlgren Air Station."

Eastern Air Line officials withheld comment on the episode until full reports are submitted.

The CAA promised an immediate investigation. Officials said a pilot found guilty of flying over such a restricted area can be punished by a fine of $1000 or by revocation of his license.

Usual procedure in such cases is a compromise settlement whereby the airline disciplines the pilot. Under the law, however, the CAA can refer the case to the Civil Aeronautics Board for "appropriate action."

Calloway's message was the second "near miss" reported by an EAL pilot since the November 1 air tragedy less than a mile south of National Airport.

On November 8, Capt. J. R. Richardson, also an EAL pilot, reported that his Lockheed Constellation nearly collided with a Bolling Air Force Base B-25 8 miles from National Airport.

Richardson said he was climbing to cruising altitude with 49 passengers aboard at the time. The Air Force declared that its plane was operating according to regulations. The CAA is investigating the incident.

20 Months Up, Bennett Meyers Tries for Parole

Former Maj. Gen. Bennett E. Meyers, wartime Air Force purchasing chief, has made another bid for freedom — this time on grounds he became eligible for parole Monday.

On that day he completed the minimum of his 20-month-to-5-year prison term. He was convicted of inducing an associate to lie to a Senate Committee investigating his connection with a Dayton airplane parts concern.

The District Parole Board says it does not generally grant releases where detainers are pending against a prisoner "except in unusual circumstances." Detainers are now pending against Meyers for Federal income taxes.

Carpenter Council Hears Keenan

Labor conditions in Europe and Asia were discussed last night by Joseph D. Keenan, director of the AFL Political Action League, at the annual dinner of the Carpenters' District Council in the Hamilton Hotel. Two hundred union officials and employers attended.

Other speakers included William O. Blaier, toastmaster, representing the International Brotherhood of Carpenters and Joiners of America; Ralph Wright, Assistant Secretary of Labor, and Lewis G. Hines, director of organization for the AFL.

Garment Union to Operate 'Labor College' for Leaders

A union-subsidized "labor college," first of its kind, will be set up this winter by the International Ladies Garment Workers Union, President David Dubinsky announced here yesterday.

Dubinsky, who heads the fourth largest union in the AFL—over 400,000 members—disclosed that the union's executive board, meeting at the Shoreham Hotel, has voted to start off the unique school with a $100,000 endowment.

"The No. 1 problem of our union," Dubinsky said, "is that so many of our officers are nearing the retirement age, and we find that we need replacements in our leadership. The "labor college"—still to be named—will be established to provide the union with future leaders.

To Operate Next Year

The "college," which will begin to operate shortly after the first of the year in New York City, will provide a 12 month training course, of which eight months will be devoted to academic schooling, and four months to work in the shop and union office. Graduates will be guaranteed jobs as organizers and business agents, starting at between $3000 to $4000 a year.

Candidates for the "labor college" must be at least 18 years old and have completed high school. Those accepted must pay their own room and board during the eight academic months, but will receive salaries for their four months of field work. Scholarships will be provided for worthy candidates unable to pay their own way. A total of 40 students will be accepted. Candidates do not have to be members of the union.

Approved 12 Years Ago

Dubinsky, regarded as one of the most progressive of the country's labor leaders, said that the ILGWU had approved the idea of "labor college" as far back as 12 years ago, but other unions had given the "cold shoulder" to the idea of setting up a labor college endowed by the general labor movement. He predicted the ILGWU experiment, if successful, will set a pattern for other large labor unions.

Arthur A. Elder, who heads the adult education division of the AFL, has been selected to head the school. He is a vice president of the American Federation of Teachers.

VICE PRESIDENT BARKLEY

Vice President Alben W. Barkley and Mrs. Carleton S. Hadley will be married in St. Louis Friday. He is pictured last night at the National Trailer Coach Manufacturers' dinner in the Mayflower Hotel. She smiles after a busy day of shopping in St. Louis, which included a special showing of her trousseau to women friends portunity to assist the Russians at the proper time, there is not a doubt in the world but that the whole burden of World War II would have been on the United States of America."

In response to the toast, the Shah paid tribute to the President's "noble efforts in the cause of peace and freedom."

Seeks Dual Goal

He said Iran sought a dual goal of external security and internal social and economic development, adding, "I most sincerely wish to extend and develop the cordial relations existing between Iran and the United States."

He invited Mr. Truman "to come to Iran as the most honored guest of the Iranian government and people."

The Shah from the storied land of Omar Khayyam and Darius the Great was extended a warm welcome by President Truman and thousands of Washingtonians when he arrived yesterday.

It was the first official visit to the United States of an Iranian monarch—and a visit ripe with implications, for oil-rich Iran lies on the southern border of Soviet Russia.

Less than 10 minutes after the Independence, the President's personal plane, had sat the 30-year-old monarch down at National Airport, these implications were being voiced by the Shah himself.

Pledges Cooperation

Speaking without notes but slowly and directly to President Truman at his side, the Shah said:

"Allies in war, we shall likewise be privileged, I trust, to work with the United States in the maintenance of peace in the Middle East and in the achievement of liberty and prosperity as the aim of all freedom-loving peoples."

Thus began a 28-day visit which will range from trips to military installations to a football game to skiing at Sun Valley.

Just before the Shah's speech in English, the President himself had said:

"Our two countries were partners in the struggles against fascism," said the Chief Executive. "The traditional friendship which bound us together during those troubled times has grown even stronger in the years since the war. Your Majesty's visit represents the high point of this relationship, which will, I am sure, become still closer in the years ahead."

Introduced to U. S.

The Shah promptly received an introduction to some traditional American ways.

After the speeches, he started to leave the speaker's rostrum when photographers began ordering more pictures of the President and the Shah shaking hands.

"These are White House photographers," the President, smiling broadly, explained to his royal visitor.

"Hold your hands a little higher," the cameraman directed, and the Shah, having quickly been indoctrinated in the power of the American press, complied along with the President.

The Shah strode in measured steps down the ramp from the Independence as hundreds watched. Then the President presented to him Secretary of State Acheson and others.

In the crisp and sunny air, he and the President reviewed an armed forces honor guard, then stepped into a black limousine for the drive along the Potomac and the Shah's first look at the city.

Past welcome signs in Persian and English bedecking the lamp-posts, the caravan rolled down Constitution ave. and into Post Square, where a vast sign "Welcome His Majesty the Shah of Iran!" and the cheers of assembled thousands greeted the monarch and his presidential host.

The trip along the Potomac had been enough to assure his majesty regarding the qualities of this city.

"I have been told," he said, "that this is one of the pleasantest American cities in which to live and work and now, seeing Washington, I can well believe it. My first impressions assure me that Washington's claims to distinction have not been exaggerated."

Given Keys to City

Commissioner John Russell Young, presenting the keys of the city to the Shah, declared that "the City of Washington will cherish this historical event—not only for its official significance, but for the pleasure of coming to know your own distinguished personage."

In the ceremony at the airport the President paid warm tribute to the Shah:

"I trust that we may have the opportunity of acquiring through your majesty a better knowledge of Iran, its heritage of greatness and culture, and the courage and far-sightedness with which present-day Iran, led by your majesty, is facing the problems of the modern world."

Significance of the Shah's visit was further pointed up in a statement by Secretary Acheson at his press conference yesterday.

"We are happy," the Secretary said, "that the Shah is coming and feel confident that his visit will strengthen our existing very friendly relations with Iran."

The Shah spent his first night in the United States last night in the Presiden's home in Blair House. Today he will move over to Prospect House. Today also he will review a parade of midshipmen at the Naval Academy at Annapolis and be guest of Secretary Acheson at a dinner tonight.

last week, as he had at previous meetings in Washington. He said he knew what Bevin had in mind about recognition, Bevin knew the American attitude, and the two had agreed to keep in touch.

Asked whether he had sought any assurances from Bevin that the British would delay recognition, the Secretary said nobody at Paris asked for assurances.

Acheson, also disclosed that the United States had protested to the Nationalist government of China against the shelling of an American merchant ship, the Flying Cloud, near Shanghai on Tuesday, and had done so without even waiting for an official account of the incident.

Cabled to Strong

The protest was cabled to Robert C. Strong, the American Charge d'Affaires at Chungking, with instructions to deliver it as soon as possible. It was based solely on the endangering of American lives.

Before further steps are taken, Acheson said, the State Department must find out exactly what happened, where it happened, and to what extent the Nationalist warships were violating international law.

On other Far Eastern subjects, Acheson announced.

1. Russia, at the request of the United States, has agreed to intercede with Communist authorities in Soviet-controlled North Korea about the detention of two members of the Economic Cooperation Administration staff for American-controlled southern Korea; and:

2. Philip C. Jessup, ambassador-at-large, probably will go to the Far East soon on a survey mission, although a final decision has not yet been reached.

Red China Recognition Opposed by O'Conor

Senator Herbert R. O'Conor (D., Md.) said yesterday that United States recognition of the Chinese Communist regime would be one of the "gravest" mistakes in American history and a "foul blot" on the Nation's name.

He issued a statement expressing concern that governments, including the United States, might recognize the Communist regime.

$30,000 Persian Rug Forms Shah's Backdrop

The Shah's backdrop at the 14th and Pennsylvania ave. speaking platform was an authentic Persian rug, valued at approximately $30,000 and loaned by the Iranian Ambassador here.

An embassy attache said the flower-designed oriental is an Isphan rug sent to Washington about four months ago. Isphan is the former capital of Iran and the country's leading rug center. The flower symbols, done in dark red and blue natural dyes, represent the nation's love of flowers as do all Persian rugs, the embassy spokesman said. It is 8 by 12 feet in size.

Truman May Lose Waistline Contest Because of Shah

The state visit of the Shah of Iran may cost President Truman money—and all because of the Chief Executive's waistline.

The President is in a weight-reducing contest with Maj. Gen. Harry H. Vaughan, his military aide, and Brig. Gen. Wallace H. Graham, his personal physician.

Each, so the story goes, must ante $10 for each pound above a given goal when the contest ends Thanksgiving Day.

The Shah's visit makes the outlook glum for the President. With state dinners scheduled for last night and the next two nights, there's grave doubt he'll make his limit.

Mr. Truman, who reportedly scaled 180 when the bet was made, must hit 175. Graham and Vaughan, 220-pounders, are aiming at 200 pounds.

Former Bulgar Official Faces 'Titoism' Trial

London, Nov. 16 (U.P.).—The Bulgarian Communists announced today that former Deputy Premier Traicho Kostov would be tried for "Titoism"—opposing complete Russian domination of his country.

At the same time, an authoritative Polish source said in Prague that three top Polish Communists, thrown out of the party's central committee, "will have to be punished."

It was indicated that in both Bulgaria and Poland the way was being prepared for big, dramatic mass trials of Communist leaders.

Laszle Rajk, former No. 2 Hungarian Communist, already has been executed as a deviationist, and it is expected here that there will be executions as the result of the prospective Sofia and Warsaw trials.

The announcement that Kostov would be tried was made by Valko Chervenkov, secretary general of the Bulgarian Communist Party.

The Polish informant said Wladyslaw Gomulka, former secretary general of the Polish Workers (Communist) Party, erred when he let "tainted characters" into the party and the government. He indicated that fellow defendants would be Construction Minister Marian Spychalski and former underground leader Zenom Kliszko.

Coplon Lawyer Flays FBI Arrest Method

Vivisection Fight

Dog Battle Stirs Hisses And Catcalls

Baltimore, Nov. 16 (AP).—Some 3000 persons, half of them booing and hissing angrily, jammed Baltimore's War Memorial hall today for a hearing on a plan to provide stray dogs for medical research here.

There was an outburst of hissing and catcalls when Dr. Alan M. Chesney, dean of the Hopkins Medical School, made the opening statement in support of the plan.

And as his group, including some of Baltimore's top medical men, presented its case, their opponents voiced noisy disagreement at frequent intervals, despite pleas by the Board of Estimates which conducted the tense session.

The crowd was separated into supporters and opponents of the plan, which is being fought by the Maryland Chapter of the Society for the Prevention of Cruelty to Animals.

"Blue Babies" Present

Four children who were saved from virtually certain death by the famed blue baby operation developed at Johns Hopkins appeared with their parents in support of the doctors' case.

One such mother, Mrs. Martha Olsen of Baltimore, was roundly booed as she pointed to her child and asked, "Please, please let the doctors have the dogs for medical research."

A leading British surgeon, Russell C. Brock, contradicted statements he said had been made by the SPCA camp that he had developed a blue baby operation in England without resort to animal experiments.

He said he had been instructed in the surgery by its developer, Dr. Alfred Blalock of Johns Hopkins, that he was now engaged on a slightly different technique, and that he would perfect that on dogs.

Dr. John C. Krantz, professor of pharmacology at the University of Maryland, was booed when he spoke of humane treatment of experimental animals, and also of "nobility of death with a purpose."

The opponents' side was presented by Miss Mary Butler Shearer, head of the Maryland SPCA; Mrs. Bennett Champ Clark of Washington; Miss Irene Castle, the former dancing star; SPCA Attorney Paul Burman and others.

New York, Nov. 16 (AP).—Judith Coplon's lawyer contended in hours of courtroom argument today that the FBI arrested his petite brunette client as a spy suspect for no good reason.

But the Government said there were compelling reasons—that failure to pick up Miss Coplon and her former Russian friend, Valentin Gubitchev, would have been like "locking the stable after the horse was stolen and the crime committed."

Federal Judge Sylvester J. Ryan listened to both sides and then said he would hear more arguments tomorrow before deciding whether the 28-year-old Miss Coplon must stand trial with Gubitchev on spy conspiracy charges.

Coplon's Boss on Stand

Miss Coplon's attorney, Archibald Palmer, introduced 11 FBI and other witnesses in a hearing designed to show that the former Government girls arrest with Gubitchev here last March 4 was illegal.

The final witness, Miss Coplon's former boss, said he gave her on the morning of her arrest a secret message which proved to be a decoy—although he didn't know it at the time.

William E. Foley, a Department of Justice section chief, was the witness. He said the message was "not" strictly confidential." And he added that he thought its contents were mostly true.

The message said Isidore G. Needleman, general counsel for Russia's Amtorg Trading Corp., was an FBI informer. It also said Amtorg was interested in getting instruments to test the pressure of atomic explosions.

The Government charges that excerpts from this message were found in Miss Coplon's purse when she and Gubitchev were arrested.

Papers Return Asked

Palmer asked the judge to make the Government return all papers found in the purse. The Government, through Fred Strine, special assistant to the Attorney General, objected. It is trying to prove the papers were official secrets that Miss Coplon planned to give Gubitchev for passing on to the Russians.

Palmer declared:

"She is no more a Communist than I am and I happen to be a Democrat."

He said the FBI didn't obtain a warrant although it had plenty of time to get one.

"This land," he declared, "does not follow the pattern of Nazi and Russian and non-democratic countries!"

Record Yield Of Corn Seen For Virginia

Richmond, Va., Nov. 16 (AP).—A record-breaking corn yield averaging 45 bushels per acre and totaling 51,840,000 bushels in Virginia this year was predicted today by the Virginia Cooperative Crop Reporting Service.

The State's corn crop averaged 43 bushels per acre last year and totaled 50,525,000 bushels.

The outcome of the "corn war" between North Carolina and Virginia, however, remained in doubt and it appeared that the Tarheels might have an edge.

Agreed to last February by Gov. William C. Tuck and Gov. W. Kerr Scott, in North Carolina, the "war" is based on an increase in the yield per acre.

British Order Dismantling Of German Plants Be Halted

Dusseldorf, Nov. 16 (NYHT.).—British orders, bringing plant dismantling in Western Germany virtually to a halt, went out from control headquarters here today. They were too late to save more than a fraction of the steel-producing capacity of the once great August Thyssen works.

Turning into action the Allied decision announced yesterday to slow dismantling almost to a halt, pending negotiations on a broad field of economic and political questions with the West German government, British authorities today issued their instructions to contractors and supervisors in charge of dismantling work.

The August Thyssen plant at Duisberg has become for Germany the focal case of all heavy industry dismantling, and when orders went out today, bringing the work to a halt, the picture was as follows:

Of nine blast furnaces, five have been taken down or wrecked from a productive standpoint, and the remaining four have an annual capacity of about one million tons of pig iron. On the steel-making side, all of the plants' Thomas converters, similar to Bessemer converters, have been removed, representing about 60 percent of the production capacity. In addition one of the two open-hearth furnaces has gone, and half of the second one, leaving about 15 percent of the plant's steel capacity still intact.

Three Fourths of Soviet Union Still Closed To Foreigners by Drastic Curbs on Travel

(Thirteenth in a Series.)

By Joseph Newman

Paris, Nov. 16 (NYHT).—Members of the Diplomatic Corps in Moscow have been able to get a better peep at the Soviet Union since restricted travel was authorized a year ago.

Conditions were found to vary from place to place, with considerable progress being made in reconstruction in some areas and very little in others. The people, too, were better clothed and fed in some regions than others. The people, as distinct from officials, and agents, were friendly and cordial.

Since restricted travel was authorized, members of the Moscow Diplomatic Corps have been allowed to go a short distance north to Yaroslavl and Vologda; south to Kursk, Kharkov and Odessa; southeast to Saratov, Stalingrad and Astrakhan on the Volga River; down to Makhach-Kala on the Caspian, and further south and inland to Tiflis, capital of the Georgian republic; a short distance west to Smolensk; east to Ufa and Chkalov, in the Urals, and beyond the Urals to Omsk and Novosibirsk in the Far East.

These facilities have not yet been extended to foreign correspondents. With one or two exceptions they continue to be restricted to Moscow. We therefore were limited to hearing about these areas from those who were able to visit them. It was still impossible to file reports about them because of Soviet censorship.

At Stalingrad, which was mostly destroyed in the war, visitors found considerable activity in reconstruction, especially government buildings and industrial plants. More than a score of American trucks (probably supplied during the war) were constantly in motion.

The people were extremely sensitive to criticism and responded to praise like children, always looking for favorable comment.

During a trip to Tiflis, the porter notified Soviet citizens of the presence of foreigners and warned them to refrain from conversation.

The dining car carried an adequate supply of food at normal restaurant prices but these were too high for most of the Russians and almost none bought any meals. About a third of the car was used for storing food, which passengers purchased as from a store.

At every stop the dining car did a big business with local inhabitants, who mobbed the car for bread and cigarettes.

Soviet forced labor was working under surveillance of armed guards along the line. The labor gangs consisted equally of men and women.

A Russian passenger explained that the margin of life was so narrow, especially among peasants, that they sometimes invite a forced labor sentence which would assure them enough to eat, knowing that the state will look after their children.

Tiflis is always a pleasant and colorful Eastern retreat for the foreigner. The Georgians have more spirit and are not as restrained as the Muscovite.

A Georgian woman, asked for directions, was most obliging and walked along with the traveler to show him the way, speaking volubly all the time. A policeman shouted to her to mind her tongue and she gave him a good tongue-lashing.

Three hours out of Moscow on a trip to Astrakhan, train passengers were awakened by police for a check on international passports and identification papers. As the train drew further away from Moscow, tension eased.

Astrakhan turned out to be a dreary, broken-down and poverty-stricken town.

The passengers on the train back to Moscow belonged to different economic classes. An army colonel received between 6000 and 8000 rubles monthly, an opera singer at the Bolshoi Theater in Moscow earned 6000 rubles for about seven performances monthly; a lieutenant colonel, 3500; metallurgical engineer, 2500; factory specialist, 1200; railroad inspector, 1000; bookkeeper, 850; railroad station master, 780; doctor, 500, and waitress, 350.

Earlier this year, after Moscow diplomatic personnel had been permitted to make these and other trips, difficulties arose in connection with a trip to Novosibirsk, suggesting that previous hamstringing tactics might be resumed to bar foreigners even from some regions which had not been proscribed.

Social 'Zeal' Called Spur to Inflation

Brannan Acts

U. S. Asks Cut In '50 Potato Production

Faced with a price support loss of 60 million dollars on surplus potatoes this year, the Government yesterday asked growers to cut production further next year.

Secretary of Agriculture Brannan announced a 1950 program providing for a reduction of about 7 percent in the planting allotment for commercial areas and a lower price support.

He set a 1950 production goal of about 335 million bushels.

This year's crop is estimated at 387 million while the 1948 crop totaled 445 million.

It cost the department about 230 million dollars to support grower prices of the 1948 crop.

Like this year's crop, next year's will be supported at 60 percent of parity, the minimum permitted by law. Parity is a figure calculated to give the farmer a fair return for his products.

But the parity price next year will be somewhat lower in terms of dollars and cents.

The Secretary said the support rate next year may average about 96 cents a bushel, compared with about $1.08 this year.

The 1950 planting allotment for commercial areas totaled 1,137,800 acres, or 85,300 less than this year. The allotment will be divided among individual farms.

Only farms staying within their allotments will be eligible to sell potatoes to the Government under the price support program.

In announcing the program, Brannan said in effect he was not satisfied with it. But he said it was the best he could set up under the new farm law. He indicated he preferred higher price supports in order to maintain grower income—providing, of course, he had a new method for disposing of surpluses.

Brannan apparently had in mind his farm plan which would permit prices of perishable products to seek their natural level. If prices averaged below support levels, the Government would make up the difference to the grower.

Under that plan, the Government would not buy surpluses as it must do now, but would allow them to move into the markets at whatever prices they would bring. But Brannan's plan was not adopted by Congress.

A Senate subcommittee heard from a Federal Reserve banker yesterday that a world-wide tendency toward "zeal for social justice" was a chief contributor to inflation.

The subcommittee, set up by the Joint Economic Committee to study Federal fiscal policies, was assured by another witness that the present "independent banking system" without added supervision should be maintained. This witness was J. L. Robertson, deputy comptroller of the currency, who added that it was a "mistaken notion" that bank examinations were "designed to catch criminals."

Alfred H. Williams, president of the Philadelphia Reserve Bank, said inflation was being fed mainly by demands for welfare such as aids to agriculture, veterans' affairs, housing and the like. But he added that demands of competing labor leaders for wage increases and the cost of defense and past wars were also factors.

Chairman Douglas (D., Ill.) asked if Williams thought welfare spending would unbalance the budget and the witness said that was "a fair statement." Then Douglas pointed out that only about 5 percent of the current budget was for welfare, while spending for defense and foreign aid was several times as great. Williams agreed that such expenditures also were "highly inflationary" because largely wasteful "except to provide a feeling of security."

Douglas got into a hot exchange with Robertson at the afternoon session when he pressed the witness for answers about "specific assets" in judging a bank's soundness. Robertson replied that it would not be possible to give such examples in a general statement. At that, Douglas pounded the table with his fist and said:

"That's a typical answer from an Administration official."

Before the hearing began, Senator Flanders (R., Vt.) demanded cuts as high as four billion dollars in Federal spending in the fiscal year ending next June 30. A prospective 5½-billion-dollar deficit, he declared, "fails to serve the Nation's economic welfare."

Truman Opposes New Projects Unless Urgent

President Truman has ruled against starting any new Federal projects next year except where the need is urgent.

The ruling was cited in a letter, made public yesterday, from retiring Secretary of the Interior J. A. Krug to the House Public Lands Committee. Krug recommended against a bill for a Federal road building program in an Idaho reclamation project.

"In connection with virtually an identical bill," Krug said, "the Bureau of the Budget has advised me that: 'The President's budget policy for 1951 does not contemplate the initiation of any new activities unless required by law or urgent public need.'"

Krugg added that construction of roads serving reclamation projects is a local responsibility.

Briton Says Rationed Marines Steal Cattle

London, Nov. 16 (U.P.).—A Labor member of Parliament today accused British marines of cattle rustling.

Herbert M. Medland complained that marines, who are rationed just as everybody else is in Britain, were staging "Commando" raids on cattle ranges near Plymouth to supplement their rations.

Medland said that in the past three months the steak-raiding marines had killed 12 cattle and that many more were missing, with numerous sheep.

Defense Housing Group Sworn in by Johnson

Defense Secretary Johnson swore in the three members of the new Defense Department Housing Commission yesterday and told them:

"You'll have a hard job—don't let people seeking favors take up your time."

The three are: Chairman Bertram E. Giesecke of Austin, Tex., Frank E. McKinney, president of the Fidelity Trust Co. of Indianapolis, and Clarence H. Low of New York.

The defense chief asked the commissioners to bring about uniformity in military housing.

Montgomery Gets Scout Executive

William H. Condon has been named field scout executive of the National Capital Area Council, Boy Scouts of America, and will report for duty December 1 in the Montgomery District.

His appointment was announced yesterday by President Richard E. Shands. Condon now is assistant scout executive of the Worcester, Mass., Council.

SEC Denies 'Alliance' With Wall Street

Post Reporter

The Securities and Exchange Commission yesterday denied charges by Cyrus Eaton, noted Cleveland financier, that it has an "unholy alliance" with Wall Street bankers.

Louis Loss, associate general counsel of SEC, told the House Subcommittee on Study of Monopoly Power, it is probably true that former SEC employes are now in Wall Street law firms. He pointed out there is no law forbidding such activity.

In fact, Loss added with a smile, Eaton and his firm, Otis and Co. of Cleveland, is now defended in proceedings brought by SEC against it by a former SEC trial examiner. He said Eaton was represented by the "very able" law firm of Arnold, Fortas and Porter. The firm is headed by Thurman Arnold, who once served, Loss said, as an SEC trial examiner.

Timing of Criticism

Loss declared that the Otis company never criticized SEC until the agency brought action against it in connection with its activities in a Kaiser-Frazer Corp. stock deal.

The SEC counsel told the subcommittee that the National Association of Securities Dealers, a semi-governmental agency comprised of securities dealers, is also considering charges against the Otis company. The NASD, he said, could suspend Otis & Co. Eaton also criticized the NASD in his testimony before the subcommittee. The NASD proceedings, Loss said, stemmed from an alleged failure of Otis & Co. to disclose information to NASD in connection with the Kaiser-Frazer stock deal.

After Loss completed his testimony, Glen Miller, executive vice president of Otis and Company, asked to be heard.

Chairman Emanuel Celler (D., N. Y.) declined to hear him on the ground that the committee had already heard testimony from Eaton and rebuttal by SEC. The subcommittee, Celler said, is not trying the difficulties of Otis and Co. over the Kaiser-Frazer stock deal.

Miller issued a statement asking why SEC "has been trying to protect Kaiser instead of the investors."

Loss disclosed that SEC has been working since 1940 on a plan for a broad revision of SEC powers. The agency will have the plan ready to submit to the next session of Congress, he said. Eaton had demanded Congressional revision of the law.

Earlier in the day, Eric Johnston, president of the Motion Picture Association of America, urged Congress to remedy what he termed the "hamstringing effects" of high taxes and scarcity of risk capital in business expansion.

Johnston said his association is designed to police the morals and ethics of the motion picture industry, and has kept out of the industry's difficulties with the Government over anti-trust actions.

Anti-Trust Question

To Celler's question as to whether violation of the anti-trust laws did not involve morals and ethics, Johnston replied that the association would be afraid of being accused of violating such laws if it intervened as an association with the producers in such matters.

Johnston declared that while small business is the "heart and core" of the Nation's economic system, anyone is "incredibly naive if he believes big business could be abolished without smashing the whole economy."

"In the years ahead, in my opinion, the inevitable trend will be toward bigger business, bigger government, bigger labor, bigger agriculture.

"This country is big and getting bigger all the time.

"This involves a big job for all of us. These big elements must be kept in balance, so that in our economic life we shall maintain fair dealing in all areas and efficiency, opportunity and competition in all areas.

"This is the test. Bigness—itself is not."

Woman Draws $50 Fine For Biting Neighbor

Miss Elester Dorsch, 22, of 1112 10th st. nw., was fined $50 yesterday for bitting the forehead of her neighbor, Estelle Rose, of 1117 10th st. nw., during an argument.

Commented Judge George D. Neilson of Municipal Court in imposing the fine, or on nonpayment, a 30-day jail term:

"One of you ought to learn to control your tongue, and the other her teeth."

Strike Threatened In Pacific Shipping

By The Associated Press

The threat of a strike of West Coast seamen developed yesterday while the Government was still busy trying to keep shipping labor peace on the Atlantic and Gulf Coasts.

The Federal Mediation Service said the AFL's Sailors Union of the Pacific is taking a strike vote, with the result to be made known Monday. This could result in a walkout Tuesday paralyzing West Coast shipping.

A strike of East Coast deck officers, represented by the AFL's Masters, Mates and Pilots Union, was averted—at least temporarily—just before a midnight deadline last night. A truce was agreed on then until next Tuesday noon. The unio nhas the privilege, under the agreement, of continuing the truce for 30 days or concelling it Monday for a strike at Tuesday noon.

12 Ships Picketed

William N. Margolis, assistant director of the Federal Mediation Service, said about a dozen vessels were picketed in East Coast ports today. One was the Ocean Navigator, owned by the Global Navigation Co., at Baltimore. It was reported that a temporary agreement was reached to let this vessel sail.

Margolis said none of the vessels picketed were covered by the truce. They are owned by firms not members of the American Merchant Marine Institute, the organization representing most of the Atlantic and Gulf shipowners. The truce covered the institute's ships.

Asked about the picket activities, a spokesman for the Masters, Mates and Pilots Union said:

Mark Off Plan

"If they won't sign up, there's only one thing we can do—mark 'em off."

Margolis arranged a meeting with the Deck Officers' Union here Friday. The Union's spokesman said its leaders will decide Friday whether they will let the truce extend beyond Tuesday.

The main issue in the East Coast dispute is a rotary hiring system demanded by the deck officers and opposed by the shipowners. This would let deck officers, other than captains and first officers, take turns at the available jobs. The deck officers also seek more wages, clothing allowances and improved working conditions.

The sailors union on the West Coast seeks improved wages and working rules and establishment of a welfare fund.

Lefts, Rights Swing Wildly in New York Maritime Dispute

New York, Nov. 16 (AP).—Hundreds of seamen milled in a jostling, shouting throng in and around the CIO National Maritime Union headquaters today in a factional row that erupted into minor violence and threatened more trouble later.

Fistfights broke out. A man was hauled bodily from a telephone booth. A newspaper photographer was rushed. A right-wing union official was rescued by police from a crowd of about 300.

Seventy policemen, 10 of them mounted, were sent to the scene after right-wing officials, charging that leftists were "besieging" the building, threatened to throw them out "gently but firmly."

Adrian Duffy, right-wing vice president of the union, said the dispute has paralyzed the hiring and shipping out of CIO seamen from the Port of New York. There were no reports, however, of delayed sailings.

Trouble started yesterday after the right-wing officials now in power suspended the union's New York Port agent, David Drummond, and 13 union patrolmen, replacing them with rightists.

Port patrolmen are union officials with such duties as collecting dues and receiving grievances. The port agent is in charge of them.

Today the new appointees remained on the top floor of the six-story NMU headquarters near the Hudson River waterfront in what union Vice President Adrian Duffy called "a state of siege." The opposing faction remained on the ground floor and out side the building.

Union counsel Herman E. Cooper declared the "siege" was planned at "Communist headquarters."

Left-wing leaders wouldn't talk about the disturbance.

The leftist officials were ousted and their supporters struck back while NMU President Joseph Curran and several other officials were out of town. Curran recently defeated the leftist faction at the union's national convention.

2 Bridges Jury Prospects Are Dropped

San Francisco, Nov. 16 (AP).—Federal Judge George B. Harris today crossed off a banker and a member of Harry Bridges' CIO Longshore Union as prospective jurors in the Bridges perjury-conspiracy trial.

Both were excused for cause. Defense attorneys objected to John L. Stoffel, bank branch manager, and the Government requested removal of the longshoreman, Edward Johnson.

The slow pace of the intensive questioning of each tentative venireman indicated it may be another day or two before the jury is selected. Bridges is accused of perjuring himself in denying in a 1945 naturalization hearing that he was a Communist.

Henry Schmidt and J. R. Robertson, officials in the longshore union which the Australia-born Bridges heads, are charged with conspiracy in substantiating testimony which helped him obtain United States citizenship.

The defense exercised the second and third of its 10 peremptory challenges to eliminate Everett Clifton van Every, secretary of the California Personnel Managers Association, and Mrs. Regina Knudson Stafford, wife of an Alameda surgeon. Mrs. Stafford said she probably had an unfavorable impression of Bridges from reading the newspapers.

During the interrogation of Stoffel, Judge Harris asked the banker whether he had any impressions of Bridges. Yes, he had—he was not in accord with the "continual strikes and the like" in which the longshore chieftain has been involved.

Johnson said he not only knew Bridges and both of his indicted aides but declared, in speaking of the president of his longshore union, "I think he's all right."

Welcome To The Shah

General Eisenhower once said that you cannot cooperate with weakness, and weakness would seem to fit the Kingdom of Iran, whose monarch the Capital welcomed yesterday. The contrary, however, is the case. The spirit of the Iranians, and the leadership of the Shah, proved to be formidable in the 1946 collision with the Russian aggressor. The Russians had infiltrated into northern Iran, and set up a creature government in the northern province of Azerbaijan under the so-called Tudeh, or Peoples, Party. Weakness would have bowed to Muscovite force. But Iran stood her ground, at the same time submitting her case to the United Nations. Should the United States support the Iranians? A look at the map, which shows little Iran at the head of the Arabian Sea leading into the Indian Ocean, made American support as necessary on strategic grounds as it was obligatory under the Charter. Unless the aggressor were checked, the Russification of the Indian Ocean would be complete, and world war made inevitable. In the great struggle that Secretary Byrnes conducted in the United Nations, Iran at home played her part magnificently, showing an iron nerve and a resourcefulness which helped to bring about the discomfiture of the puppet Tudeh Party. Every attempt to start trouble was countered by swift measures undertaken by Premier Ghavam under the direct encouragement of the Shah. Thanks to these moves the Tudeh Party lost face throughout Iran, and since face is something very precious in the East, the rebel Tudeh leaders gave up the struggle, and Russia, deprived of native support, had no option but to retire behind its own frontiers. The Shah's resolution in upholding Premier Ghavam's actions is worthy of recognition, and entitles him to the honor which our Government and people are now extending to him. It is a natural leader as well as a King that the Capital greeted yesterday. We hope his stay will be pleasant, and that the association between Iran and America, so auspiciously cemented in 1946, will always be friendly.

Plea For Progress

The weekly student newspaper of The George Washington University, The Hatchet, published an editorial Tuesday appealing to the institution's board of trustees to abandon the barrier they have maintained against admission of Negro students. The rational and temperate tone of the editorial gives it force. It is significant, we think, as an expression of student sentiment on a subject respecting which such sentiment has great validity. It points to a reform which, if adopted by the board of trustees, would enhance the stature of the university as a place of learning in a free society.

"Try as we may to rationalize our way out of it," The Hatchet editorial declares, "we are forced to recognize that this university in the Nation's Capital is, in this respect, behind the times and insensitive to current trends in American life." It is, indeed, the only institution of high academic standing in this community which still excludes qualified students on grounds of race alone. If it defends its discrimination on the dubious ground that it is responsive to a community pattern, the appropriate answer, it seems to us, is that it is peculiarly the function of a university to assert leadership. The student body of the George Washington University has indicated to its trustees an opportunity to break with a shameful and outmoded tradition and bring the institution into harmony with the great ideas it professes and exemplifies.

Lost Opportunity

When Secretary Acheson was questioned yesterday about current reports that the Germans might be allowed to establish their own army, he failed to quash them categorically as contrary to American policy. No doubt the Secretary was reluctant to discuss anything that would impinge upon the issues soon to be considered by the Parliaments of the western European nations. But in letting this particular sleeping dog lie, he missed a compelling opportunity to assert the supremacy of statesmanship over mere military strategy.

From the narrow point of view of military minds, a German army would be an obvious asset to the strategy of containing Soviet power. It would help to redress the imbalance of western manpower against the threat of Russian aggression. So, of course, would Spanish manpower or manpower of any origin; and to military minds the political implications of the origin might easily seem negligible. But the political implications cannot be negligible to statesmen. They are the very essence of diplomacy—of the kind of contest of national wills now in progress, in which armed force is only one of the factors and the enlistment of world opinion is a vital strategic consideration.

The re-creation at this time of a German army would strip this country's foreign policy of all its affirmative promise, substituting for the promotion of liberty throughout the world a mere negative and sterile anti-communism. Even the most narrow military thinking must reckon this a momentous loss. Moreover, the anxiety that any measure of German rearmament must engender among those peoples who thrice in a century have suffered from German aggression would be likely at once to rend the whole Atlantic Alliance.

Military strategy is properly only an adjunct of national policy. It cannot be allowed to dominate what it is intended to serve. If, as we presume, the talk about a German army is no more than military talk, the sooner it is quieted the better. The world has no wish to return to 1938 and the kind of "peace in our time" promised by Neville Chamberlain. It needs reassurance that the planning of policy is in the hands not of generals but of statesmen.

Washington's Traffic

When Pierre l'Enfant laid out his plan for the Federal City more than 150 years ago, he did not envisage his broad highways choked to the curbs with 100-horsepower chariots. The wide streets he planned, occupying half the land area of the city, are a boon in many ways, but they also serve to attract more cars than the downtown area can accommodate. The radial avenues criss-crossing the normal street pattern are a convenience, but they also are a curse in that they create many complex intersections. The parks and circles which punctuate the avenues are lovely, but they also are bottlenecks for fast motorized traffic. Washington's traffic problem is by no means as bad as that in some other major cities, but, for the reasons cited, it is unique.

Fundamentally the problem is that too many persons want to drive private automobiles into too small an area. This is a fact, first, because of the concentration of the great bulk of Federal and private employment in the district bounded by 3d, K and 23d sts. nw., and C st. sw. Second, the way that transit patronage has declined since the war shows that private automobiles are winning preference over existing transportation. A third corollary factor is the great growth of suburban areas and the inability of public commuting facilities to serve all these areas adequately. Finally, the location of the Potomac bridges makes it difficult to divert through traffic around the congested area.

If the problem is not precisely new, neither is there any indication that it is slackening. Car ownership is increasing with population. Washington proper now has about 875,000 residents, and the metropolitan area 1,400,000. Many estimates hold that Washington's population will stabilize at around one million, but there is no limit on the potential expansion of outlying districts—and unless public transportation keeps pace with the growth, the jam will increase. Meanwhile the city is faced with the inexorable fact that its downtown streets will carry only about 30 percent more cars than at present. Obviously, if Washington is not to experience impossible congestion within the relatively near future, it must take bold steps to channelize this mounting traffic.

Official planning agencies have not been asleep to the need. For example, the National Capital Park and Planning Commission, which reviews and coordinates all programs, has an ambitious scheme to attack the problem at its roots. It hopes to hold Federal employment in the downtown area at approximately its present level by developing a new Federal area along East Capitol st. It also plans to encourage the development of small centers of Federal employment away from the city proper, as in the case of the present Census Bureau location at Suitland, Md. Meanwhile the Highway and Traffic Departments have cooperated to lay out a comprehensive plan for major highway construction. The so-called Greiner-DeLeuw report of 1946, as modified to take account of current needs, forms the basis of most of the District planning.

Despite some disagreement as to details, most experts concur that the problem must be attacked simultaneously along several lines:

1. Express highways to speed the flow of traffic around the downtown area and to provide better access from outlying districts.

2. More off-street parking facilities, segregated as to purpose (i. e., shopping, all-day parking, etc.). Fringe parking lots for all-day parkers, with rapid transportation downtown, are essential to this program.

3. Faster public transportation, especially to outlying areas, with rerouting and off-street terminal facilities downtown.

The important thing to remember is that each of these lines of attack is a part of the integrated whole. No one approach alone will relieve Washington's traffic problem. However strong the temptation to deal piecemeal with such difficulties as the congestion at Washington Circle, they cannot be treated as isolated problems without inviting the danger of merely increasing the traffic jams elsewhere.

In succeeding editorials we shall consider each of the ingredients in an over-all solution to Washington's traffic dilemma, along with the problem of finance.

Northern Outpost

To the many justifications for granting Statehood to Alaska, Gov. Ernest Gruening now has added another—defense. By this he means the defense of the United States proper no less than that of the Territory itself. In an interview with U. S. News & World Report, Governor Gruening has outlined the perilous inadequacy of the military forces now in Alaska to cope with an airborne invasion from Siberia. Although Congress finally did provide some of the military housing that is the first essential, it has been difficult to focus congressional attention on this northern outpost. Governor Gruening believes that Alaska will not receive its due until it has voting representation in Congress.

With Fairbanks only 600-odd miles from Siberian bases, the primary problem is to defend airports which, in enemy hands, would facilitate the bombing of the United States proper. The radar warning net, about which little has been made public, also is obviously necessary, as is maintenance of the lanes of communication to Alaska. Maintenance covers sea and air defense of the inside shipping channel from Seattle to Skagway; improvement of the Alcan highway which, with proper surfacing, may obviate the need for the railroad now being talked about; improvement, jointly with Canada, of the highway connecting the seaport of Haines with the Alcan route; augmentation of Alaska's internal road system and upkeep of the Alaska Railroad.

Obviously these provisions also would make Alaska more accessible to commercial ventures. That is the point—economic development and defense go hand in hand. Alaska is a vast storehouse of timber and mineral riches needed in the United States in time of peace no less than in war. Has not the time come, after 82 years of wardship during which Alaska has demonstrated its capacity for intelligent self-government, to integrate the Territory fully with the United States through Statehood?

Another Bonus

Although bigger and better bonuses for World War II veterans have received short shrift so far in Congress, the States have not been so successful in resisting this specialized type of political pressure. This is evident from the action of Pennsylvania voters in approving a 500-million-dollar bonus by a 3-1 margin. The size of this payment—the largest in any State—more than offsets the fact that in New Jersey a 105-million-dollar gift was beaten by a small majority.

The addition of Pennsylvania brings the list of States paying World War II bonuses to 16 and the amount of money involved to more than 2½ billion dollars. Referendums are still to be held in Missouri and West Virginia, and an advisory referendum approval in Delaware has not yet been implemented. In the remaining 28 States, according to the Tax Foundation, bonus plans have been defeated by Legislatures in 10 instances and by referendums in four other cases. Only in six States has the bonus issue not come to some sort of vote.

The 2½ billion dollars already voted, of course, does not represent the ultimate cost of these payments. World War I bonuses, still being paid in some States, will have cost a total of 590 millions as contrasted with the original estimate of 399 millions. Nor do the cold figures indicate the financial gyrations some of the States have been put to. Pennsylvania, for example, has yet to find a way to pay the new bonus. Fourteen States have had to resort to borrowing through bond issues. Indiana will meet the cost through an increased income tax, but only Vermont has paid the bonus entirely out of surplus. Methods for retiring bonds vary from an increase in cigarette taxes to boosted property levies.

Bonus advocates in Congress ought to be required to take a look at what these schemes have done to the fiscal position of the States. In most of the States the veterans themselves will eventually find themselves paying a large share of the benefits out of their own pockets.

WATER DIVINERS

"Black adler, sweet apple, witch hazel will reach Earth downward to show where the water veins run";
I was told in New Hampshire; in Vermont to use peach,
Wild plum or the cherry and the trick would be done:—
"Grasp lightly, thumbs upward, palms out to the sun!"

Over north hills I have watched old men travel,
Forked stick in their hands and a faith in their eyes,
Seeking some water-vein's course to unravel,
Seeking the spring for the forked stick is wise.

Their gaze lingers long on the hill and the hollow
Plotting the course that nature must flow.
Then, where earth is softer and verdure is thick,
Watch for the tremble, the turn of the stick!

"Look, here is the vein, see the pull of the hazel,
Here it dips hardest, so dig for your well,
Water is hidden but not from black alder,
Deep are the springs, but the apple will tell."

Knowledge comes up from deep springs of the race,
Knowledge held fast in eyes that are old,
The forked stick has found them a peace beyond telling,
"It's certain for water, for silver, or gold,
Choose well your rod and take heed how you hold!"

Bombing Morality

Your readers should be very grateful for Brig. Gen. Telford Taylor's article of November 13 on the moral implication of atomic bombing. While many of us may differ with the author's conclusions, he has done a great service in clarifying the true nature and basic issues of "area bombing." Careful thought, however, should be given to the implications of the general's solution to this problem and the impact of the doctrine of the primacy of "enlightened self-interest" on the conduct of war, the basis of international law, and the structure of the civilized community.

General Taylor justifies the use of obliteration bombing as a terror weapon against civilians on the grounds that it was a practice of the Germans in the last war which we adopted. If one combatant violates international agreements such as The Hague Covenant, all are legally and morally free to do so; the violation is no longer a crime.

Yet since that time the United States has recognized the existence of crimes against the peace and humanity, war crimes; has bound itself to submit to the decrees of the International Court of Justice in accord with "the general principles of law recognized by civilized nations," and has tried the Nazi criminals under the Charter of the International Military Tribunal which specifically outlaws the "wanton destruction of cities, towns, and villages."

But the general raises a more fundamental question. Stating that the "absolute nature of morality is a question for philosophers" and hence not of general concern, he proposes a course of practical amorality. He implies that moral strictures, valid for the individual, do not apply to the state. To refrain from denying the existence of any ethical norm other than expediency, but to act as if there were none, is a distinction without a difference. The result is Machiavellianism.

It is true that there are many shortcomings in the present practice of international law. To recognize this is one thing, to accept and approve it, quite another. However the difficult problem of atomic weapons is to be solved, one principle should be kept clearly in mind. If the difference between the Soviet Union and the West lies in our acceptance and their rejection of immutable principles of justice and morals which bind men and nations and which are the bedrock of our culture, we cannot afford to sacrifice them for any expediency. If this difference does not exist, then what are we all shouting about?

"Wallace's Chickens"

"There is no surplus food in terms of potential consumption if everyone had all he wanted. Any time that production costs can be lowered and more food can be made available at the same price, the public stands to benefit—provided that price supports are adjusted accordingly." Thus spake Zarathustra in your November 12 editorial on "Wallace's Chickens."

If production costs are lowered and more of the product becomes available at the same price, it is not the public but the producer who is benefited.

To adjust price supports "accordingly," in such an event, can mean only one thing, to lower the fixed prices at which the Government will loan 90 percent of parity on the increased production. If this is done, the product does not become available at the same price, but at a lower price, for on a falling market, the parity price is always the market price.

You have thus pointed up the fallacy of our whole system of fixing prices. They encourage the producer to produce but do not encourage the consumer to consume. Just because there are nine million dozen eggs in the caves does not tempt me to eat eggs at 89 cents per dozen. Lower the price and I will eat more eggs.

The question now is not how I can encourage you to produce more eggs, but how the eggs you have already produced can be placed into consumption without lowering prices of eggs.

The test as to what benefits "you and me" is whether you and I have as high real wages today as we had before the war. The answer is "No." Somewhere in this New-Fair Deal shuffle our standard of living has declined in the past decade.

If "Wallace's Chickens" come home to roost, it makes little difference whether they came home as a flock, as they did in 1929, when we thought increased production warranted ever-rising prices, or one at a time, as they will if we think increased production warrants "the same price."

REALIST.

(Editor's Note: We plead guilty to inexact terminology. What we meant was the same cost to consumers—in other words, more food for their money.)

Berea College

The article in your October 30 issue about studying weaving at Berea College states: "Berea, one of the very few places where weaving is taught, in a mountain school . . . where beans are served with every meal. But Mrs. Young liked them."

I am not surprised, for one has to go south of the Mason and Dixon line to get string beans that are fit to eat. And, too, at Berea the beans were most likely fresh, since the college gardens cover some 50 acres and the college farm contains over 800 acres.

Berea College was founded 95 years ago by a young Congregationalist preacher, John G. Fee, who was born in Kentucky. His father was a slave owner. However, he became an abolitionist, was tarred and feathered by a mob and told to leave the State. He lived in Kentucky until 1901.

Aided and encouraged by Cassius M. Clay, he established the school there in the foothills to teach the boys and girls coming from the non-slave-holding folk living in the Kentucky mountains. These boys and girls work to pay their way through school. Among the trade courses is the mountain handicraft of weaving—a heritage from the Kentucky pioneer.

Since D. K. Pearson of Chicago, wearing an old faded Prince Albert coat, gave Berea $50,000 at the commencement in 1896, the growth of the college has been exceptional. It has an endowment now larger than that of any private institution of learning in 29 States.

Unification In Perspective

There has been a clearing of the atmosphere in the defense services controversy. Observers differ, however, as to whether the present is merely a lull in the conflict, or marks the beginning of a period of much-needed harmony. In either event, when harmony comes, it must be of a character that the public interest requires.

Some persons have dwelt upon supposed unfairness toward one or another branch of the defense service or toward an officer of the service; others have dwelt upon clouds cast upon the future status of a branch of the service; others upon lack of consideration and tact; still others upon professional questions involving the possible elimination of certain instrumentalities of warfare of especial interest to a branch of the service.

These matters are either mere trivia, or at most are of minor importance, compared with the main issue often hardly touched upon. The main issue is, of course, that of the public interest in not losing or unnecessarily adding to the losses of the next war, if we should be so unfortunate as to have one, through lack of service coordination.

It seems clear that there has not been complete subordination of loyalty to one's particular service or unit to the over-all loyalty to the defense of the United States. The lesser loyalty is a valuable adjunct to the greater. But when the perspective is lost and it becomes an end in itself, no longer intensifying but limiting the greater loyalty, it becomes less than a virtue.

In order to gain maximum harmony there is another requisite. Those in highest authority over military affairs, it seems clear, should exercise greater tact, consideration and fairness in their relations with high military men, men whose character and patriotism are beyond question. Personal and service feelings have been unnecessarily trodden upon under highly delicate and controversial circumstances.

But it does not follow that there should be appeasement. Under the American system the ultimate authority, the power to make decisions, correct or mistaken, is vested in civilian hands. If after a fair hearing of all eminent service views and due consideration, there remains any high military officer who simply cannot accept the decisions of the final civil authority, who cannot cooperate, his elimination from high position must follow. Such an officer would be in contempt of the Congress, the Chief Executive and of democratic principles governing the relations between civil and military authorities.

There is little doubt that a great preponderance of public sentiment will support such action if deemed necessary. Unquestionably a substantial portion, both of veterans and of the general public, believe that the greatest disaster in our military history, that at Pearl Harbor with lesser similar disasters at other bases on the same day, would have been avoided if there had been full coordination and cooperation among the civil and military chiefs.

If that be true the war in the East was lengthened by months, the cost increased by billions, and the dead and maimed increased by uncounted thousands, by the type of deficiency now sought to be corrected.

The entire public knows that the unification statute and policy are intended to make such another reverse as Pearl Harbor impossible. It is also well known that the unification policy of the Congress is furthermore intended to prevent potential foes from being made bolder by the hope of military chaos at America's highest military levels. Steps carrying the unification policy into effect will be overwhelmingly indorsed by our public sentiment.

'Castle' Trend In Home Life

By Malvina Lindsay

More Moats Needed

READING ONCE again that family life was being menaced by civilization, I sought the opinion of Dr. Olympus Graph, eminent authority on the social scene.

"Of course the family's being menaced," he said. "When hasn't it been? But now it has no place to hole in."

"But I thought the family didn't want to stay home."

"It's being driven to do so. Either that or go mad. What with the radio racket in street cars, buses, taxis, stores, streets, what with this cacophony of traffic noises, overhead and underfoot, what with this frantic, honking rush in motor cars of unimportant people on unimportant missions, what with this anthill swarming of human beings into every open space, what, I ask you, can the family do but retreat to its cave?

"In fact," continued Dr. Graph, "I predict a return of castle psychology in home life. That's why something should be done at once about our 'castles.' Too many of them are madhouses."

I pointed out that the United States Public Health Service has just requested funds for research into what constitutes a healthy and safe house for an American family. "As you may know," I told Dr. Graph," the accident rate in the home is so high that many families are afraid to stay home. Now if something can be done to keep us from cracking our skulls in bathtubs, slipping on waxed floors, opening the wrong doors and falling downstairs, home may take on a new appeal."

"THAT'S not enough," objected Dr. Graph. "Some way must be found so we can sit still at least five minutes undisturbed in our so-called castles."

"But this research," I explained, "also would be directed toward finding the perfect bedroom, the one best designed for healthful, undisturbed sleep. And there may be studies in climate control so that once we're inside our castles we won't suffer from heat, cold or even humidity."

"That's all very fine," interrupted Dr. Graph, "but it doesn't go far enough. What good is your perfect bedroom if your neighbors have a noisy party, or a blaring radio, or screaming children, or a family row, or if garbage collectors, truckmen, tradesmen clatter through streets and alleys before dawn? No, our first need in housing is a padded cell—I mean soundproof walls—also floors and ceilings.

"And what about some research on a safe and healthy apartment," continued Dr. Graph. "More and more people must live in apartments as the move to cities continues. Who's going to develop the small, soundproof apartment John Doe can refer to as his castle?"

"But, Dr. Graph, isn't apartment life already supposed to be too aloof and impersonal for the good of the family?"

"Show me any life in this country that's impersonal so long as telephones ring," shot back the savant. "By the way, what are the researchers going to do about the nerve-shattering shriek of the telephone? I'll bet half the home accidents are caused by persons rushing to quiet the telephone. Great service that the telephone is, it yet has placed us at the summons of the world—including bores, collectors, beggars, people with causes, moral burglars of all kinds."

"BUT THAT," I pointed out, will be changed when we get a device whereby we can see who's calling before we answer, also a device to record messages when we don't answer. Please remember, Dr. Graph, that science is wonderful.

"I'll admit that," was the reply, "only when science devises a way by which modern plumbing can be made noiseless, or at least less noisy.

"Also," continued the doctor, "if we are to develop castles for our nerve-shattered families, science must find some way to relieve the maidless housewife from being the slave of the doorbell. Even some kind of peephole similar to those of speakeasies in the prohibition era might help. But why couldn't science devise a Geiger-counter instrument so persons inside a house—I mean a castle—could detect who was approaching outside and take appropriate defense measures?"

"You sound so unsociable, Dr. Graph. I thought man needed to mingle with his fellow men."

"He does. But what good is he to his fellow men if he hasn't enough rest and privacy to develop something to give them. What good to anybody is a jitterbug whose mind is at the summons not only of every Tom, Dick and Harry, but of every sound wave?"

"Then you think the family may be saved if it can get a castle?"

"Yes—one with a wide enough moat, scientifically speaking."

Jefferson College

The letter of Joseph M. Stone (published November 9) suggesting that we send a small contribution to Jefferson Military College in Natchez, Miss., to show our appreciation of its stand for tolerance so appealed to us that even our colored maid wanted to contribute. I hope that many who read his letter will follow his example so that the college will know what a lift of the spirit such an action gives to all of us. George Armstrong's shocking offer of 50 million dollars to teach racial and religious prejudice shows us the need of mustering all our forces to fight this evil. H. MAY JOHNSON.

Communist Politics

By Marquis Childs

Soviet Ire Over Tito

BELGRADE, Yugoslavia.—This country, isolated as it is between East and West, affords what may well be the most revealing study of power and its uses and abuses in the present-day world. Above all, it is the clash of naked force that scarcely bothers to disguise its objectives.

If Marshal Tito had not set out immediately and with ruthless determination after the war to consolidate his hold on Yugoslavia, he could never have defied the might of the Soviet Union. That is a fact that is scarcely comprehended in the West. It is of the first importance in understanding what is happening in the Soviet orbit.

The events leading up to the break between Tito and Stalin clearly show the politics of Communist power. In its hidden violence it has something of the quality of the struggle of prehistoric monsters in the Silurian swamps.

The ultimate aim of the strategy employed by Russia must have been obvious to Tito fairly early in the game. That aim was so to weaken Tito's position in the country that he would be a vassal of the USSR. If he balked, then he could be removed and destroyed.

Pressure from Moscow before the break, for example, was to play down the role of Yugoslavia's partisans in liberating the country and to put greater emphasis on the contribution of the Red army. Likewise Tito was to be subordinated to Stalin.

But Tito was already enshrined, first, by the heroism and drama of his leadership in the war and, second, by ceaseless propaganda following the war. Tito knew the precise value of that hero worship just as well as did the members of the Politburo in the Kremlin.

THERE also was pressure from Moscow to speed up the collectivizing of the land. That would have meant bucking strong resistance from land-owning peasants. Again Tito knew that to respond to this pressure would be to risk a breakdown of farm production, economic upheaval and a weakening of his regime.

In instance after instance he refused to act on the hints, the nudges and, finally, the pokes from Moscow. He could say no because his position was quite different from that of any other satellite leader.

While Tito was indoctrinated in Moscow, he returned alone to lead his partisan forces against the German foe. Romania, Bulgaria and Hungary were taken by the Red army, and when they were "liberated" Moscow sent in a whole set of stooges to take over. If one stooge fails, he can be played off against another.

Equally important, Tito built the monolithic structure of Yugoslav communism with his own power at the apex. The 400,000 Communists run this country with total control exercised by the Yugoslav Politburo.

Even more significant is the fact that 95 percent of the army command are today partisan comrades who fought at Tito's side in the bloody conflict with foreign and domestic foes. Their loyalty is deep, particularly since all must rise or fall together. It is hard to imagine even the most minor Quisling raising his head to do the bidding of the Soviet Union.

THIS internal security grounded on unchallenged control would seem to justify the quiet confidence Tito displays to visitors. I discerned this in my interview with him last week. Secure at home, he believes, or frequently says he believes, that his enemy in Moscow will not crush him in open warfare.

With this latter view most Balkan experts—and they grow on every bush—are in agreement. It should be added, however, that there is a small but significant dissent.

Since force is the sole determinant, why is Soviet Russia bulwarking the satellite states where the Russian grasp is already sure? Are these merely maneuvers—the popular explanation—to prevent other Titos from asserting their independence?

The dissenters believe that the Russian moves—installing Marshal Rokossovsky in command of Poland's army and less well advertised steps—are far more than mere preventive measures. They point to what is happening in Bulgaria, where virtually every key official has been replaced by a Russian sent in by Moscow.

In the minority view, all this is being done in preparation for the use of armed might to bring Tito down. In the face of rebuff and defeat, the failure of force by indirection, the masters of the Kremlin must inevitably erase the defiant heretic by direct means. Force feeds on force, and there can be no compromise.

Winter is setting in and the familiar wind blows down the Danube, bringing a bone-deep cold straight from the steppes of Russia. Already there is snow in the mountain passes. But the spring may bring something other than the uneasy not-peace-not-war that now prevails.

Free Germany Hit by Slurring War Trials, Gen. Taylor Says

Germany through the Education and Information programs.

4. Establishment of a "permanent international penal jurisdiction" to enforce "Nuernberg principles." Otherwise "it will be inevitable that the Germans will conclude that Nuernberg was 'for Germans only.'"

Taylor did not specify who he considered was "playing down" the record of the Nazis as shown in the Nuernberg trials. At one point he said:

"It is noteworthy that some Germans have covertly urged that the Nuernberg proceedings should not be published in German because the trials are said to be a 'sore spot' in relations between the United States and the German people.

"Nowhere—and particularly not within Germany—can the Nuernberg trials be 'played down' and regardless of whether the ultimate judgment of history with respect to Nuernberg is favorable or unfavorable, they will not sink into oblivion' . . . . they are bound to be increasingly a focal point of discussion or controversy within Germany. . . .

"We must give all posible support to . . . democratic German groups. In my opinion, any effort to 'soft pedal' Nuernberg will inevitably play into the hands of those Germans who do not want a democratic Germany."

Taylor also appeared at points to be criticizing the Department of the Army and American occupation authorities in Germany for failing to push the democratization program.

"There has been an unfortunate lack of planned effort to utilize the documents and other evidence disclosed at the trials so as to advance the purposes of the occupation," he declared. "The reorientation of German thought along democratic lines must ultimately be accomplished by the Germans themselves.

"But the least we can do is to insure that the documents which expose the true nature of the Third Reich are circulated throughout Germany. . . . It should be a primary objective of the Education and Information Control branches of the occupational administration to effect this distribution."

Taylor also reported that some "unfinished business" remains after dismantling of the American war crimes prosecution machinery. Those actually tried were selected from among "numerous other war crimes suspects against whom there was ample evidence," he said. And while most of those not tried were lesser fry, there were exceptions.

Without explaining why, Taylor said "it was necessary" to eliminate a number of high-ranking Nazis who were "closely connected" with the Jewish extermination program. Also a number of top criminals were not indicted by the American forces at Nuernberg because it was planned to transfer them to one of the former German-occupied countries for trial.

"Owing to developments in the international situation," he added, "a number of these transfers did not take place, and the individuals in question have never been brought to trial at all."

And four Nazis indicted at Nuernberg have never been tried at all. They include Gustav von Bohlen of the Krupp munitions dynasty, who "undoubtedly will be physically fit to stand trial," and Max Brueggeman, who Taylor dismissed as not a "major" war crimes suspect.

Two Urged for Trial

But the other two, he urged, should certainly be tried, if they become physically fit for trial. They are Karl Engert, vice president of the "notorious Peoples Court" and SS colonel, and Field Marshal Maximilian von Weichs, charged with major responsibility for slaughter of hostages in the Balkans.

"It is true that the prevailing trend and climate of political opinion in Germany make it quite unlikely that the German authorities will eagerly pursue this course of action," Taylor said of his proposal to start new war crime trials, "but if the situation in Germany is indeed such that the Germans will not bring to trial men such as those who were deeply implicated in the extermination of European Jewry, the sooner that fact is apparent and generally understood, the better it will be for all concerned."

Taylor strongly recommended that the administration of Landsberg Prison, where convicted war criminals are kept, be retained in American hands. German officials taking over would be under constant pressure from "ultra-nationalists" and "very definite" dangers of escapes would result.

General Taylor did not spell out what he had in mind in setting up a "permanent international penal jurisdiction," but he urged that Nuernberg be viewed not as an "episode" and merely the "product of the political forces of the moment" but as a "process."

"There is little chance," he said, "That the judgments and principles of Nuernberg will be of much benefit to Germany if they fail to win more than lip service in the world at large."

Taylor was chief prosecutor for the military war crimes trials in Nuernberg in 1946 and 1947, which followed the big four-power tribunal which tried the major Nazis. He gave these statistics of the military trials:

There were 185 indictments and in 12 trials 142 Nazis were convicted, 35 were acquitted, 4 committed suicide and 4 were ruled to be physically unable to defend themselves.

Twenty-six defendants were sentenced to death and two of these later had their sentences reduced to life imprisonment. Twenty-one received life imprisonment and the remainder sentences up to 25 years.

One hundred lawyers took part in the prosecutions, part of a peak over-all staff of 1776.

There were 1200 court sessions in the 12 cases and 133,000 pages in the court transcript. Mimeograph machines ground out 65,000 pages per month for the courts and 175,000 documents were photostated monthly.

One A-Bomb Would Knock Out Washington; Agency Dispersal Suggested to Avert Attack

What Blast Would Do

The blast and the wind which followed it, the document declared, would:

1. Crush or render unusable the ordinary load-bearing brick wall dwellings for a distance of 7000 to 8000 feet from the zero point (the spot directly under the center of the detonation).

2. Severely damage steel mill-type buildings for a distance of 4000 to 5000 feet from the zero point.

3. Cause substantial damage up to 2500 feet for multi-story steel or reinforced concrete buildings. Japanese experience showed that these modern, tall buildings would suffer such damage that 10 to 15 percent of their main columns and beams would require replacement, much of their outer wall shell would be stripped off, and they would lose their partitions and windows.

At distances less than 2500 feet from zero point, the damage would be proportionately greater.

Homes Would Be Crushed

Residences would be crushed or rendered useless over an area of 6 to 8 square miles.

In addition to the blast and wind damage, the report points out that heat from the blast itself would kindle inflammables in its way. In addition, there would be many more fires caused by broken gas and electric lines, and in particular from combustible material coming in contact with cooking and process fires.

Here, then, is the picture:

"Accordingly, in an instant the usually dependable telephone, telegraph, electric service and transportation (both public and private) would cease to exist in the damaged areas."

(The "damaged areas" presumably comprise the circle of about 14,000 to 16,000 feet in diameter. Editor's note.)

Water Pressure Near Nothing

"Also because of the numerous broken pipes in houses, water pressure would fall to near nothing.

"Firefighting equipment inside the damaged area would probably be crushed by the collapse of the fire houses and with water pressure gone, the many fires would speedily merge to destroy the greater part of the crushed area."

What happens to the people in the area? The report answers that in the two Japanese cities, "everyone within one-half mile not protected by earth, steel or concrete died and the incidence of radiation injury was very high up to approximately one and one-fourth miles" from the zero point.

Mostly Caught in Open

But, the report notes, the casualties were high because there was little warning, and what warning there was was not heeded. People were caught for the most part in the open.

With an adequate warning, and with shelters in basements or lower stories of big buildings—said shelters prepared in advance—and with people utilizing those shelters, casualties could be minimized or even eliminated, the AEC said.

But that would not save the buildings, or permit them to resume their normal functioning, the report found.

For proof, the AEC studied what would happen to its own building, on the assumption that the zero point of a bomb burst was within 2500 feet of it.

In the AEC's basement, but presumably not elsewhere, the accumulated layers of cement floors above would protect against the radiation effects of the bomb. But "windows, partitions and possibly walls would become missiles." There would be approximately 80 percent casualties and an unknown number of radiation deaths. Naturally, less substantial buildings and their inhabitants would suffer greater damage.

"The inevitable conclusion is that the building would have to be abandoned in the event of an impending attack, or well before."

Generally Applicable

The report said the predictions for the AEC building (the former Public Health Service headquarters, of stone, steel and concrete) would be generally applicable to other Washington public buildings.

The report was careful to note that no one could do the enemy's thinking for him, and therefore made no definite predictions of where the bombs would be aimed. And, it noted, no one can tell the strength of the enemy bomb.

But, it continued, aside from strictly military targets in the Washington area, such as the Naval Gun Factory, there seems to be three "obvious" aiming points.

One was the Pentagon. The second was a spot in the Capitol area, which would also catch the Union Station.

A third was a circle of 5000 feet in diameter in the general White House-State Department area. From the buildings which the report mentioned as being rendered useless by such a blast, it appeared that AEC experts had assumed, as a zero point, the corner of New York ave. and 18th st.

Rich Target Area

Within 2500 feet of this spot are to be found:

The White House, Treasury, Executive Offices (Old State), Interior, Navy, Pan American Union, Federal Power Commission, Court of Claims, Red Cross, Federal Works Agency, Federal Reserve, Veterans Administration, RFC and AEC buildings, to mention only the most important.

The report, entitled, "The City of Washington and an Atomic Bomb Attack," was made as one of a series of studies by the AEC on the vulnerability of its facilities to atomic weapons. For obvious reasons this report studied the effect of the bomb on the city, not merely on the AEC building itself.

It was circulated with a covering letter from AEC chairman David E. Lilienthal. He noted "The recent atomic explosion in Russia brings closer the time when decisions must be made on the major issues of civilian defense, including the matter of dispersal out from congested urban areas of facilities such as those of Government in Washington."

Cites Problems Involved

The report, while calling for dispersal as the only solution if an atomic bomb attack is really anticipated, noted that the tremendous problems involved—physical, financial and psychological—were beyond the AEC's scope and authority.

Without total dispersal, the report indicated that several useful steps could nevertheless be undertaken. It said:

"Long-range community planning to place projected hospitals, fire stations and other essential emergency services in properly dispersed fashion should be encouraged. Routes available for emergency evacuation should be planned. These may well provide effective fire lanes through areas now highly vulnerable."

But, even so, the Japanese experience showed that about all the local community can do after an attack is to rescue the injured in the area before the sweeping fires reach them.

"But because of destruction and confusion following the bomb burst," the report concluded, "general relief must come from outside. Therefore, Washington must look for help to outlying undamaged areas, suburbs and cities as far as Baltimore, Philadelphia and Richmond. Relief must be organized with this in view."

consideration of rival East and West "peace" proposals.

McNeil made a dramatic appeal to Vishinsky, seated alongside him, to urge the Kremlin to "pull up the blinds" and cooperate in fidence which must be the basis restoring the "international con- of any world agreement."

The youthful Scot warned:

"The time for understanding steadily, if gradually, runs out. I don't mean we are on the edge of war. I do not think the Stalinist regime contemplates war and certainly no one else does. But it must be plain that this campaign to sabotage peace is as disastrous in its consequence as its failure . . . relations do not improve and the danger is that the free world, snubbed, rebuffed, misrepresented, will reduce to a minimum its relations with the Soviet government . . . separation will harm us all mentally, morally and physically. The danger of accidental war will never be absent."

A British delegation spokesman said McNeil did not mean to imply that diplomatic relations with Russia might be broken. All he meant, the spokesman said, was that contacts, already small, would become even less" unless Russia mended its ways.

The full General Assembly, meeting at Flushing Meadow, once again displayed encouraging East-West agreement on the important question of technical aid to underdeveloped countries.

By a unanmous vote, the Assembly approved the trail-blazing U. N. program calling for prompt summoning of an international conference to detail expanded plans for lifting the economies of backward areas.

92 Arrested in Colombia

Bogota, Colombia, Nov. 16 (U.P.).—Ninety-two persons were arrested and large quantities of explosives were seized in what was officially described today as an abortive Communist plot in west central Colombia.

Reports from Valle and Caldas states said the center of the disturbance was the city of Armenia, important coffee center in Caldas state. The movement also had ramifications in Valle state.

Bogota reports to New York said that Liberal Party sources claimed 73 persons had been killed in Armenia thus far but that Conservative Party sources said only two were killed.

Army forces were reported to have besieged Armenia by daybreak after an uprising in the city largely populated by Liberals.

Conservatives charged the rebels had tried to sabotage vital railway installations in Armenia.

The national government, acting under special state of siege powers assumed a week ago today, ordered a nation-wide curfew at 8 p. m.—heretofore curfew had been set at 11 p. m.

Quintanilla Named Head Of OAS Council

Luis A. Quintanilla, ambassador-representative of Mexico, was today elected president of the Council of the Organization of American States for 1950. Hector David Castro of El Salvador was elected vice president.

Dr. Quintanilla has had a 27-year period as a career diplomat, which has taken him to more than half a dozen cities in two hemispheres, including Moscow.

Dr. Quintanilla began his diplomatic career in 1922 representing his country in Washington, Guatemala, Brazil and Paris. He was named Ambassador to the Soviet Union in 1942, to Colombia in 1945 and to the Pan American Union in 1946.

He attended the sessions of the League of Nations in 1933 at Geneva, the San Francisco Conference and the Chapultapec Foreign Ministers Conference in 1945, the second United General Assembly at Lake Success in 1947 and the Ninth International Conference of American States held at Bogota in 1948.

Ambassador Castro has been Salvadorean envoy to the United States since 1934. He has been chief of his country's delegation to the United Nations since 1945. He also seryed on the United Nations Special Committee on Palestine (1947). A former Minister of Foreign Affairs, Dr. Castro also held the posts of undersecretary in the Ministeries of Finance and War.

Truman Hears British Need More 'Carrots'

The Rev. Bryan Green, Episcopalian rector of Birmingham, England, yesterday gave President Truman a little lecture on human—and donkey—nature.

The way to handle a donkey, he told the President, is to beat him with a stick or entice him into action with a carrot.

And "human nature being what it is," he added, "we all need a bit of the stick and a bit of the carrot."

Green said British workers are still full of spirit in their battle against economic adversity.

But right now, he added, "the British people need a bit more carrot to give them incentive."

The rector is visiting the National Cathedral here. He was accompanied to the White House by Dean John W. Suter of the Cathedral and Bishop Angus Dun of the Washington Episcopal Diocese.

Acheson Backs Up McCloy, About to Begin German Talks

ment soon, probably tomorrow, and Foreign Minister Schuman of France will have to face his National Assembly on the same subject next week.

But Acheson parried all questions dealing with German problems raised at the Paris meeting. He even declined repeated openings to say whether he favored letting the new west German republic have an army.

There have been many reports in recent weeks that American military men here and in Europe would like to see Germany have a small army or an armed police force, at least big enough for internal security purposes.

When reporters asked Acheson about these stories, he answered only that the arming of Germany had not been discussed at Paris or elsewhere, by him or by anyone. Persistent questioning brought only a repetition of this denial, but no hint of his own views on the subject.

Instead of telling what happened at Paris, the Secretary used a good part of his press conference to praise the Germans and the American chiefs in Germany.

He said the west German leaders were showing vigor and seriousness in organizing their new republic. He thought the people and municipal authorities of western Berlin were working together regardless of party, with energy, conviction, imagination and unity.

He said it was no idle flattery to praise Gen. Thomas T. Handy, the American commander in Germany, and Maj. Gen. Maxwell D. Taylor, the commander in Berlin. No army in the world could produce finer officers, the Secretary said; they made one proud to be an American.

He even had a friendly word for Gen. Vassili Chuikov, the Soviet commander in Germany, who came to a reception for him in Berlin last weekend. Acheson said he was delighted to see Chukov, had met him once before and had high regard for him.

On another subject, Acheson announced that the North Atlantic Council, the supreme body set up under the North Atlantic pact, would meet here Friday, with himself in the chair but with the resident envoys of the Pact countries representing their foreign ministers.

Previously the Defense Department had announced that the chiefs of staff of the Pact countries would meet in Paris Nov. 29 and the defense ministers on December 1. The chief job of the Paris meetings is to approve broad plans drawn up by the military staffs for a combined defense of the North Atlantic area.

100,000 Kin of Servicemen Here May Lose Medical Care

ommendation on the Pace proposal. Without taking a definite for or against stand, the department said, he urged that if it is decided to charge for medical care of dependents, it should be on sliding scale, with costs dependent upon the rank and pay of the officer or enlisted man.

A hint of yesterday's action was provided last week at the meeting of the Association of Military Surgeons here. Then, Dr. Paul B. Magnuson, medical director of the Veterans Administration, stated that the Defense Department had issued an order relegating to a "secondary" role in service hospitals all nonmilitary activities. This was interpreted as a move to deny Veterans Administration patients use of hospital beds at Walter Reed, Bethesda Naval and other service hospitals.

The department said last night that there at 31,900 military personnel in the immediate Washington area, and about 63,000 including such bases as Fort Belvoir and Quantico, Va., and Fort Meade and Andrews Air Base, Md. This would put the number of dependents at approximately 100,000, not including the families of retired personnel in the area, for which no figures were available.

Pace based his plan for eliminating medical benefits on the ground that military personnel now receive 330 millions more a year under the pay boost act.

That raise, he said, lifted military pay to "levels commensurate with pay" of Federal civilian employes who do not receive such medical, dental and hospital care.

Pace also said that elimination of the services would cut military costs and help ease the shortage of doctors and dentists in the Army, Navy and Air Force.

The Hoover Commission suggested that Congress spell out what beneficiaries should receive medical care as a move to reduce hospitalization costs. It described free medical care as actually a part of the pay and emoluments received by members of the armed forces and said this factor should be considered in any action by Congress.

$1.75 a Day in Hospital

In addition to free attention by military doctors, dependents of service personnel can get hospitalization for about $1.75 a day. The Armed Forces estimate that it costs as high as $13 a day to operate a hospital room.

Under Pace's plan, the discontinuation of the services would affect only military dependents within the United States.

Even then, Pace told Johnson, there should be an exception for service families stationed in areas where private facilities are insufficient to provide the care.

However, in such cases, he proposed that military services charge the full cost they incur in providing the service.

He also specified that service should be provided on a humanitarian basis in event of emergency."

Clerk's Fidelity Goes Unrewarded

Associated Press WIREPHOTO

MRS. KATHERINE HINKEL, clerk at Chicago's municipal airport magazine stand, was almost offered a $1 reward yesterday after she found a wallet containing $5000 and saw to it that it was returned to the owner. As Mrs. Hinkel declared, "Why that's not . . . ," the owner snatched back the $1 and strode away. What she intended to say was, "Why that's not necessary.

might hurt rather than help the situation.

There was strong belief among Government labor officials yesterday that the President would set up a special fact-finding board by the end of the week to investigate the contract dispute and to recommend a basis of settlement.

However, there are believed to be two other alternatives for the President: to invoke the antistrike injunction provisions of the Taft-Hartley Act, and to sit tight.

The President may himself disclose his plans at his weekly press conference at 4 p. m. today.

Government labor officials were of the opinion yesterday that the President would not sit tight and permit John L. Lewis to call out some 380,000 soft coal miners again on December 1, as he has threatened to do. The UMW chief temporarily ordered his miners back to work last week after a 52-day strike which thus far has failed to win its objective: contract improvement.

Demands Not Yet Definite

Lewis has not yet specified what these improvements are to be, but he has said they will cost around 30 to 35 cents per ton, and could be deducted from the profits of the operators. He has indicated the miners want shorter hours, higher pay, and an increased contribution to the miners' welfare fund. The fund, which has been receiving 20 cents per ton, was "frozen" in mid-September to keep it from going in the red.

The operators have signified their willingness to continue the old contract as to wages and hours, but have demanded elimination of certain clauses which permits John L. to call out his miners at will. The operators also want more control over the welfare fund.

Direct contract negotiations between the operators and the UMW collapsed a couple of weeks ago; mediation efforts ran into a dead-end soon after. John L. has offered to renew direct collective bargaining with all or any of the operators, but there have been no takers.

County Weighs Cameraman's Assault Charge

The Prince Georges County Commissioners took under advisement yesterday charges that a Prince Georges County policeman, James H. Burgess, had assaulted Paul Schmick, a photographer for the Washington Star.

The photographer contended he was pushed by Burgess when he tried to make a picture of 7-year-old Claire Marie Hanratty, a lost child for whom nearly 1000 volunteers searched the night of November 2.

Burgess contended the photographer was blocking the doorway in the Prince Georges General Hospital at Cheverly where he was aiding in carrying the child on a stretcher.

The Commissioners also heard complaint that Vincent A. Simmel, 62, a member of the Cottage City fire department, had been manhandled by police when he protested treatment of the photographer.

Police said Simmel was ejected from the hospital for talking too loud, and claimed he had apologized for his action, which Simmel denied.

Club Headwaiter Held on Arlington Numbers Charge

A man identified as a headwaiter at the Army-Navy Country Club for the past 21 years, was arrested yesterday on charges of selling numbers.

He is William Henry Jones, 50. He was arrested at his rooming house at 1724 South Edgewood st., Arlington.

Arrested with him by Arlington Detective Russell Runyon and State ABC Investigator M. K. Bryant was Booker T. Henderson, 28, of 3446 South 22d st., Arlington, also charged with operating a lottery. Each was released on $500 bond.

Peron Accused Of Disregarding Human Rights

Buenos Aires, Nov. 16 (AP).—An opposition political leader today accused President Juan D. Peron of disregarding "fundamental human rights." He suggested his Conservation Party might bring the matter to the attention of the United Nations.

Eduardo Augusto Garcia, lawyer and outspoken critic of the Peron administration, asked the Conservative Party to appeal to the President to lift "all measures which now restrict liberty of expression in newspapers, radio and the campaign platform."

The Peronista Party controls both Houses of the Argentine Congress. At the closing session of Congress September 30, a bill rigidly controlling new political parties was passed. The opposition charged it would take Argentina down the road to totalitarianism.

Student Unit Asks Facts on Hotel Damage

Charlottesville, Va., Nov. 16 (AP). The University of Virginia Student Council today asked Philadelphia hotel managers to cooperate in establishing facts about student misconduct November 5 following Virginia's football victory over Pennsylvania.

Promising punishment of any students whose guilt is established, the Student Council called on the Philadelphia Hotel Association to supply "names, places, dates, damages by individuals and other pertinent facts."

Philadelphia hotel men were reminded by the council that no reply has been received in answer to a letter written by James H. Newman, dean of students, at the request of University President Colgate W. Darden, jr., October 18, nearly three weeks before the game.

In the letter, Dean Newman told the Philadelphia hotel managers that "our student council will take appropriate action on any case reported if it is supported by established facts."

Virginia's Student Council was given full authority a year and a half ago to punish students found guilty of misconduct.

U. S. Accuses Judge In Antitrust Case

The Justice Department yesterday accused Judge Ben H. Rice, jr., of the United States District Court at San Antonio, Tex., of "abuse of judicial power and abnegation of judicial duty" in handling a Government antitrust case.

The department made the complaint in a motion filed with the Supreme Court. The motion was signed by Solicitor General Philip B. Perlman.

Perlman asked the high tribunal to overrule an order by Judge Rice in the case of 84 defendants accused of violating the Sherman Antitrust Act in their conduct of small loan offices.

Judge Rice ordered the 84 defendants tried separately. He said that the indictment against them was ambiguous, verbose and replete with conclusions.

"This order of severance," Perlman's motion stated, "prevents any effective trial of the indictment and constitutes both an abuse of judicial power and abnegation of judicial duty . . ."

Perlman asked the Supreme Court to require Rice to explain why the severance order should not be canceled.

The indictment named two associations, 27 corporations, and 55 individuals. The defendants operate loan offices in 23 States. They were charged in the indictment with agreeing among themselves to fix minimum interest rates, to adhere to various conditions of doing business, and to cooperate with each other in eliminating competitors and opposing regulatory legislation.

The Supreme Court will announce its action later on the Government's request.

Judge Rice was appointed by President Truman September 28, 1945.

Lausche Says He Won't Run Against Taft

Columbus, Ohio, Nov. 16 (AP).—Ohio's Democratic Governor, Frank J. Lausche, stated deninitely today that he would not seek the United States Senate seat now held by Republican Robert A. Taft.

Lausche, one of Ohio's better vote-getters, announced:

"To put all conjecture at rest, I will not be a candidate for the United States Senate."

His announcement was made in a telegram to an AFL-UAW delegation which on Monday asked him to seek his party's nomination for Senator in 1950.

Taft already is campaigning and is regarded as virtually certain to win renomination. Lausche would have stood a good chance to win the Democratic nomination.

Lausche led the ticket last election in defeating Republican Thomas J. Herbert for the Governorship. Most political observers believed Lausche's strength had much to do with the Republican loss of five congressional seats.

Four other men already have entered the race for the Democratic nomination:

William L. White of Newark, an inventor and businessman; William A. Kelley of Cincinnati, a lawyer who tried unsuccessfully for the nomination as Congressman-at-large in 1946; State Auditor Joseph T. Ferguson, and John Martin, Jefferson County businessman.

3 of Foreign Staff Arrested by Czechs

Prague, Nov. 16 (U.P.).—Three members of the Foreign Ministry staff have been arrested for smuggling antigovernment letters to Czech missions and embassies abroad in diplomatic pouches, informed sources said tonight.

(The report coincided with a British announcement in Berlin that the entire Czech reparations mission in the British zone of Germany has broken with the Prague Communist regime and has been granted "protection and political asylum" by Britain.)

The smuggled letters were alleged to have called on all Czech diplomats to repudiate the Communist government. The sources said they might have been responsible for the defection of the reparations mission.

The letters were believed to have been sent to all Czech missions abroad, including the various military and economic agencies in Germany.

According to these sources, police searched thoroughly the 400-room Cernin Palace here, which houses the Foreign Ministry. Numerous members of the diplomatic staff were questioned and at least three arrests made, the sources said.

(The British announcement Berlin said the request for political asylum was made yesterday by Reparations Mission Chief Dr. L. Rozboril on behalf of the seven-man mission staff and their 10 dependents.)

Resentful Tom Hamilton Denies 'Purity Dies at Pitt'

This Morning

—With Shirley Povich

ON SATURDAY afternoon at Central High School Stadium, a schoolboy football rivalry comes of age—a ripe old 50—when Tech and Central meet again in their ivy-hung classic that was born at the turn of the century. But it isn't quite the climax game of the schoolboy season.

The bigger game, with the title riding on it, will have its locale in Griffith Stadium on the night of November 25, and Central and Tech will be playing Saturday for the chance to take it all that evening—probably against Woodrow Wilson High.

POVICH

The Washington Post is sponsoring that title game, designed to settle not only the scholastic championship, but to fill the sadly depleted coffers of school athletic funds. Ignored by the Board of Education, which budgets no money for schoolboy sports, the school teams don't even own enough helmets to outfit the players.

The opponent of Central or Tech in the championship game will be established tomorrow. That's when Wilson meets Chamberlian High. It can be presumed with some safety that Wilson, beaten only once in five previous games, will lick Chamberlain, which has failed to win any of its contests.

TECH AND CENTRAL are moving up to their battle on Saturday with identical records of four victories, no losses, and a single tie. Against the Tech backfield ace, Ray Fox, who is the leading scorer of the league after being converted from an end, Central will throw its own two backfield prides—Quarterback Jimmy Sullivan and Halfback Terry Gregory, a pair of left-handed passers who operate in the same unit.

In sponsoring next week's title game, The Washington Post's efforts are directed toward raising at least $20,000 to alleviate the sorry situation in high school sports locally. Washington is one of the few large cities in which school sports get a complete brushoff in budget allotments, with the Board of Education taking a narrow view of the whole setup.

Not until this year did the Board of Education even deign to put the athletic teams on an equal basis with the Cadets and the debating teams. At least not until this year did the B. of E. even melt to the point of appointing an Athletic Committee. That was achieved finally by sports-minded C. Melvin Sharpe, chairman of the board, who had to cast a vote from the chair to break a 4-4 tie.

IN CONTRAST, the city of Baltimore, which had been operating with a $15,000 budget for high school sports, last year upped the allotment to $90,000. Washington kids who want to play football for their schools still have to buy their own football shoes, that are $14 items. At some schools, substitute players must wait on the jerseys and helmets of the players coming out of the game.

The school principals, in some cases, are actually reduced to cadging athletic funds from other school allotments. All of this despite the fact that coaches are paid as teachers and get no extra stipends for coaching. Because of that inequity, such coaches as Joey Kaufmann, whose Eastern teams won the track titles, and Herman Littman, whose Roosevelt quintest won the basketball titles, have quit the school system.

Thus because of the unattractive working conditions, with teachers doubling as coaches, there is always the danger that Washington schools must settle for inferior coaches. School sports must subsist on the 25-cent admissions charged the pupils who hold athletic activity tickets, and in the cases of those schools without stadiums there are no home games to attend.

DR. GEORGE D. STRAYER, noted educator, summarized Washington's unhealthy schoolboy sports situation in a special report to Congress last summer after surveying athletic systems nationally. Of Washington's he said, "there is a tolerant indifference toward athletics by the High School principals." The latter, most of them, obviously are afraid of bucking the Board of Education.

So The Washington Post is trying to help. In two past seasons, The Post sponsored high school championships at Griffith Stadium, with each game netting $20,000 or more. In previous years, those sums went to Children's Hospital and the Community Chest in large measure. This year, the entire proceeds will be divided among the athletic treasuries of all the public high schools.

Thus before another year, there ought to be enough helmets, shoes and pads to go around when the schoolboys want to play football. The tickets for the big game at Griffith Stadium the night of November 25 are now on sale. Be nice if you'd buy some.

Final Football Contest

Tigers-Dartmouth; It's Hard One to Pick

PRINCETON VS. DARTMOUTH. One of the top games in the East this season. Princeton has won the Big Three title. Dartmouth last week upset previously unbeaten Cornell.

Watch your step in selecting the winner of this game in The Washington Post's final Pick-the-Winners contest of this season..

Each week the winner of the contest receives two tickets to the Army-Navy game in Philadelphia, November 26, and an all-expense-paid trip to this game for two persons.

The person submitting the most accurate entry each week also receives four tickets to a major college or professional game in this area. The Washington Post will select this game.

The contest each week includes 21 major college games. Each contestant will select the winner (or tie) of 20 of these games. On the twenty-first game, each contestant will give the "Probable Score."

Caps Beat Denver on Free Throws

By Jack Walsh
Post Reporter

The Caps ended their two-game losing streak by taking the Denver Nuggets into camp, 99-90, last night at Uline Arena.

Slimmest crowd of the young season, 1463, saw the visitors absorb their ninth NBA setback in the same number of games.

Denver is the only team in the league without a victory. The Nuggets kept their win column unblemished by committing 36 personals. They outscored the Caps from the floor, 33 baskets to 30.

The Caps maintained a 10-point cushion mainly by converting 39 of their 49 free throw attempts. Denver had 31 chances and missed only seven of them.

The visitors fielded a fine three-man team composed of little Kenny Sailors, Bon Brown and Dillard Crocker. They accounted for 65 points with Sailors' 26 high for both teams.

Washington played it smarter with the scoring more evenly divided among six men. Dick O'Keefe made the most, 19. Following closely were Jack Nichols, 18; Johny Norlander, 15; Leo Katkaveck 13; Bob Feerick, 12, and Chuck Gilmur, 9.

Powars Will Sell Tickets Door to Door

COACH FORREST (Frosty) Powars, whose Chamberlain football team is out of the Interhigh championship picture, yesterday said he will go on a door-to-door campaign to sell tickets to the November 25 championship game at Griffith Stadium.

"I only have 25 helmets for the 40 members of my squad," said Powars yesterday. "By getting more adults to patronize the big game, I can get the money to buy more urgently needed helmets."

The game's proceeds will be divided equally among the 10 Interhigh schools to buy athletic equipment, which is sorely needed.

Powars asked for a large bloc of tickets which he plans to sell to his friends with the help of members of his football squad. Chamberlain meets Wilson Friday at Wilson in an effort to knock the Tigers out of the Southern Division pennant fight.

ANACOSTIA and Central hopped on the ticket-selling band-wagon, following the lead of Wilson's Home and School Association, which is distributing 2500 tickets among its members.

Mrs. Opal Corkery, Anacostia principal, said yesterday that parents of all Anacostia students will be asked to attend the championship game, sponsored by The Washington Post and Board of Education.

At a Central Alumni "C" Club meeting last night, James A. Reilly, president, selected a committee of eight to mail out letters to 1000 members advising them of the importance of the title contest, regardless of whether or not Central's team participates.

Bob Newby and John Jankowski are arranging to reserve a special section of seats for Central Alumni "C" Club members.

Lakers' Late Rush Decides, 94-71

Tech Renews Old Rivalry With Central

Those two granddaddies of Interhigh football, Central and McKinley Tech fight it out for another championship Saturday when they renew a rivalry that began back near the turn of the century.

At stake is the Northern Division title and the honor of playing Wilson or Anacostia for the city Interhigh crown the night of November 25 at Griffith Stadium.

Tech is favored to even up its series with Central by winning Saturday. Central, the oldest high school in Washington has won 21 over Tech and lost 20. The other games resulted in ties.

Kickoff is set for 2 p. m. at Central Stadium, and the alumni, who always troop back for this game, are expected to swell the crowd

Central's Vikings haven't lost an Interhigh League game since Tech beat them for the championship in 1947 before 18,000 at Griffith Stadium, 14-7. Central avenged that loss in last season's opener, 25-0, and went on to win the championship.

Between them, Central and Tech, second oldest school, have won 36 of the last 48 titles, Tech having won 19 and Central 16.

In interhigh play, both teams have identical records, four wins, no losses and one tie. They are tied for first place. This is the finale for the team that loses.

The winner's foe in the championship game November 25 will be determined Friday when Wilson entertains Chamberlain at 3 p. m.

Wilson, with only loss on its record, needs only to tie or beat winless Chamberlain in order to clinch the Southern title.

The big championship classic will be sponsored by The Washington Post and the Board of Education. A trophy, emblematic of the high schools 1 to 9 championship, will be presented by the Almas Temple Shrine.

Kane Will Miss Every Hoya Game—But He 'Made' the Team

By Jack Walsh
Post Reporter

RIGHT BEFORE the last football game of the season, it's conventional to pull out all stops for the departing seniors.

You know how it goes, Joe Glutz will be giving his all for the last time for dear old Alma Mater, etc.

This, however, is a little piece about a departing senior who hasn't played one minute this season.

When Georgetown meets George Washington at Griffith Stadium Saturday, Tackle Jerry Kane won't even be in uniform. As you shall see, it won't be his fault.

Before the season, the rangy Philadelphian clinched a varsity berth. In spring practice, he won the outstanding player award in the intrasquad Blue-Gray game.

Kane was on his way to a big year. Then, two weeks before the Holy Cross opener, it happened. The knee he injured last year against NYU was badly banged. Kane was back in a sweat suit.

At one of the pre-season scrimmages, Jerry was lying idly on the sideline watching the rough stuff. A teammate mentioned that a victim of a particularly bruising tackle wasn't a scholarship man, just a student who wanted to play.

Kane looked up at the broiling sun and murmured, "He must love the game."

HE C' ULDN'T have loved it much more than Kane. The lanky, almost fragile looking tackle from Philadelphia was back in pads before the Maryland game. In a scrimmage, the bad knee again was injured.

Kane just wouldn't give up. He tried to get back before the NYU and Villanova games with the same disastrous results. Finally, Coach Bob Margarita stepped in. It was getting so bad that Kane's knee would pop out just from hitting the blocking dummy.

"I couldn't put him in a game with that knee," Margarita explained, "so I made him stop."

Halfback Jack Kivus, one of 17 seniors, said, "Don't think Kane hasn't helped this team a lot. Everyone of the squad watched him try again and again to get back in action. It was an inspiration to all of us."

Line Forms Early For Interhigh Title Game Tickets

The line of adults in front of the Wilson High Bank formed a little early yesterday for the purchase of tickets to the Interhigh League football championship game at Griffith Stadium the night of November 25.

Tickets weren't scheduled to arrive until 3 p. m. yesterday, but some parents were there ahead of time to buy them. Tickets will be sold at Wilson today from 9 a. m. until 3 p. m. Get there early. They'll be sold on a first-come-first-served basis.

Tickets also are on sale at:

Tickets for the general public are priced at $1.25, $1.75 and $2.26 tax included.

Tickets for high school students will be sold at all interhighs.

Stags Win, 85-72

Chicago, Nov. 16 (AP).—The Chicago Stags moved into second place in the Central Division of the National Basketball Association tonight with an 85-to-72 victory over the Fort Wayne (Ind.) Pistons before 4200 fans in Chicago Stadium.

School Stars on Air

George Laroque of National Training School and Bobby Lynn of Eastern, The Washington Post's scholastic players of the week will will be interviewed tonight at 6:15 on Bob Wolff's sports broadcast over WINX.

School Heads Sizzle Over Magazine's Headline

Pittsburgh, Nov. 16 (AP).—The University of Pittsburgh and some of its friends took exception today to the title of a magazine article on Pitt football entitled "Purity Dies at Pitt."

No one objects to the Saturday Evening Post story by Associate Editor Harry T. Paxton. Pitt officials call it a fair enough recital of the school's football history.

But they insist Panther purity is not dead and that the title does not match the article.

Tom Hamilton, former athletic director at Annapolis, who came to Pitt this year in the same capacity, said, "It is surprising the magazine used the title when the substance of the story does not bear out the implication."

Hamilton added:

"This crude device would imply that I am involved in shady practices and I naturally resent this."

Chancellor Takes Exception

Of Hamilton, a former Navy captain and Navy football coach, the article said "He is a thoroughly honest fellow who sincerely believes that good varsity teams have a definite place in fostering a school's esprit de corps."

Chancellor Rufus H. Fitzgerald of Pitt also took exception to the title. He said in a statement:

"The University of Pittsburgh advises the Saturday Evening Post to have its headline writers read their articles.

"The university wishes to make clear that its athletic policies and practices are open to the representatives of the National Collegiate Athletic Association, the Western Conference and those colleges and universities with which it has athletic relations."

He said the board of trustees had approved the current program when it approved Hamilton's appointuent. The statement called Hamilton "for 25 years a symbol of honesty and fair play."

Pitt History Recalled

The article reviews Pitt history from the days of 1915-1919 when former Coach Pop Warner built the Panthers into an almost unbeatable combination.. It touches on the days of the late Jock Sutherland, coach when Pitt was feared throughout the land.

Paxton tells how Pitt a dozen years ago switched to drastic deemphasis program which left its teams weak and helpless against the big gridiron powers.

Warriors Whip Celtics by 93-80

Natie Brown Defeats Baxter

Natie Brown won by disqualification from Laverne Baxter in 10 minutes in the feature wrestling match last night at Turner's Arena. In the semifinal, Marvin Mercer defeated Steve Gob in 12 minutes with a flying tackle and a body press.

Hughes Wins

Thomas Hughes of Army Map Service shot a 282 x 300 to win first place in last night's shooting of the D. C. Rifle League at the National Capital Club's range.

And Candini

Harris Seeks Infielder as Draft Choice

Cincinnati, Nov. 16.—Bucky Harris, manager of the Nats, arrived here today armed with the major league's first choice in the draft of minor league talent which gets under way tomorrow morning.

Harris admitted his first bid would be for "a Coast League infielder I saw a lot of last season," and following that choice he hoped to claim two Coast League pitchers at the $10,000 draft price

"If we land the infielder I like, the fact that we finished in eighth place last season and got the first draft choice will be a blessing," said Harris.

Harris also declared he was "definitely interested" in claiming Milo Candini, the former Washington righthander who was sold to the Oakland club last June.

"From what I saw of Candini in the Coast League, he looked as if he could win in the majors," said Harris. "Mr. Griffith admits that his club made a mistake with Candini the past few years when they used him as a relief pitcher. He hasn't the temperament for it, but as a starter I think he could make good."

While in Cincinnati, Harris is also laying the groundwork for deals by the Washington club that may be culminated at the major league meetings in New York next month.

"We're definitely in the market for George Stirnweiss of the Yankees and Gerry Priddy of the Browns," he said. "Any deal with the Yankees might be a trade involving three or four players, but the Browns are chiefly interested in cash for Priddy."

The Detroit Tigers and Cleveland Indians, with representatives here, have already broached deals to Harris. The Indians are angling for either Gil Coan or Ed Stewart, outfielders, and the Tigers are interested both in Coan and First Baseman Eddie Robinson. "We'll keep Robinson," said Harris tersely.

Draftsman Picks 19 of 20 To Win Contest

Patience paid off for John G. Mandes, 17 Rhode Island ave., nw., winner of last week's Washington Post Pick-the-Winners contest.

Mandes

Undaunted by three years of failure, Mandes finally hit the right combination. Successfully predicting three of the four big upsets last Saturday, Mandes turned in the victourious entry, 19 of 20 right.

Mandes, a native Washingtonian who's a draftsman at the Naval Gun Factory, confessed yesterday that he's been submitting entries since The Washington Post started its popular contest.

He refused to give up and neither should you. This week's contest is the last of the season. There's still time for you to join the rest of the winners who received two all-expense trips to the Army-Navy classic in Philadelphia, November 26.

Mandes also was awarded four tickets to the Redskins-Chicago Bear game here Sunday. He shrewdly selected Dartmouth, Oregon State and North Carolina State in their upsets. He missed only TCU's 14-13 stunner over Texas.

Runnersup who missed only two games include James M. Mulligan, 4318 Rowalt dr., College Park, Md.; Dorothea Fitzgerald, 6509 Fairfax rd., Bethesda, Md.; Nancy Smith, 1228 Holbrook st. ne.; R. P. McFerren, 415 Brandywine st. se.; and William Sturdevant, 8904 Oneida Lane, Bethesda.

Prep — High

Players of the Week

GEORGE LAROQUE
National Training School

George Laroque, The Washington Post's Prep Player of the week, is certainly determined.

George led National Training School to a 14-0 win over a group of former high school stars playing as the Irish War Vets last Saturday after just being released from the infirmary, where he had been confined all week with an infected ear drum.

The 6-foot, 185-pounder took the opening kickoff and returned it 80 yards to the Irish 2, where he was overtaken from behind. However the play was called back for an offside penalty to nullify the fine runback.

After an exchange of punts, the elusive Laroque went 80 yards on the first play from scrimmage for a touchdown.

The other N. T. S. touchdown came on a pass from Laroque to Tom Beach, a play covering 45 yards.

George played the full game, offense and defense, always in there giving a good account of himself. He rushed one extra point across to figure in all N. T. S. scoring.

Other prep players rating honorable mention last week were: George MacWhorter, Friends back who scored three times to lead Friends to a 24-7 victory over Baltimore Friends; Walter Leach, St. Albans back who scored twice as St. Albans continued an undefeated season at the expense of its traditional rival, Landon, 28-7.

BOBBY LYNN
Eastern High

Bobby Lynn, Eastern tackle, rates The Washington Post's commendation as High Player of the Week off his performance in the Ramblers' 14-13 upset of Washington-Lee.

It was Bobby's last game in high school and the 18-year-old, 6-foot, 198-pound lad made it a great one.

Lynn, who graduates in June, kicked both extra points last week to give the Easterners their margin of victory.

Bobby also kicked off for Eastern as well as calling the defensive formations and playing the full 48 minutes.

Lynn isn't fast but moves with the grace of a big cat ready to pounce on its prey, and he appears out of nowhere to plug up the holes in the line.

Other standout high school players last week were, Jack O'Neil, Bethesda Chevy Chase back who took over for the late Rickey Onslow, Pat McDougall, hard-running Central back, and Pete Wedel, George Washington end who scored two touchdowns as the Presidents downed Episcopal, 32-7.—WEST McLEAN.

Papit, Price Involved in Rushing Duel

With Virginia idle, Johnny Papit slipped to second leading rusher in the country, NCAB statistics revealed yesterday.

John (Kayo) Dottley, Ole Miss fullback, took over the top spot with 1096 yards to Papit's 1040. Dottley has played two more games and rushed 10 more times.

Papit and Tulane's Eddie Price promise to stage a rushing duel that should be almost as interesting as the game at Charlottesville Saturday. Price, who has been going on long touchdown jaunts in his last two games, ranks fourth.

Preakness Ace Scores At $19.60

By Walter Haight
Post Reporter

Pimlico, Md., Nov. 16.—Noble Impulse, purchased by Justin Funkhouser at auction here for $18,000, paid dividends on the investment at the first asking.

The son of Bulldog, reported to have leg trouble and overlooked in the betting, carried the Charles Town, W. Va., colors to victory in the Brown Prince 2d, featuring the Wednesday program.

The 3-year-old colt, who set the pace and finished third behind Capot in this year's Preakness, got home three lengths in front of the favorite Brookfield Farm's Imacomin with Mrs. E. H. Augustus' Seven League third in the field of seven.

Noble Impulse turned in the excellent Pimlico time of 1:11 1/5 over a fast track. The winner's odds mounted steadily throughout the wagering and he finally paid $19.60.

It was the second winner in a row for Williams, who won the fifth race with Audley Farms' Starknightess, paying $6.20. Dick nursed the filly along close to the pace of Doreen's Boy and then took over in the stretch to win going away.

Apprentice Dick Lawless, who was employed to wash the mud off the number board at Charles Town only last May, furthered his riding success by winning with Mrs. J. B. Bond's Tink, returning $8.40, in the fourth race.

Good Catch For All

Rockfish Now Staging Record Run in Chesapeake Bay

By Ralph Murdock

THE ANTICIPATED run of rockfish is now a reality. The only way that you can miss catching your share is to stay home. Never in 20 years has the writer seen more stripers in the upper Chesapeake Bay. The fish surface at sunrise and stay up until dusk. The larger catches are being made off Sharp's Light and here are a few of the hauls just made.

Murdock

F. E. Shaum, Charles D. Baker, James C. Baumgarten and Donald Eckenmode of Taneytown, Md., boated 290 rock while fishing with Capt. Ralph Drennon on the Mary Daph. Most of the fish were of the pan-size variety with a few 4-pounders. The party fished all day off Sharp's Light.

Here's another catch of 334 which was made by four anglers at the same spot. The anglers were Floyd Gross, John Brinkman and Bill Hubbard. The fish average from 1 to 2 pounds. Sharp's Light was also the scene of action.

Thirteen members of the G. P. O. Fishing Club, fishing out of Wesley Stinnett's at North Beach, landed a total of 446. Small white Lusby bucktails proved to be the ideal prescription although they tried several lures.

On the Mary Daph were William Yarwood, John Holohan, Guy Jeanneret and Hershel Dodd. Their contribution to the catch was 140 rock.

Aboard the Gail D were Preston Turner, Earl Wise, Arthur Krause and Pat Stewart. They nabbed 123.

The Skippy, which was skippered by the capable Al Corbin, had 183 rock aboard. He was assisted by Dave Taylor, Bob Daniel, Willis Jones, Claude Goetzger and Frank Goetzger. Some of their catches weighed 2½ pounds.

Al Ferrell, Jack Ellis, Ben Jones and the writer fished with Capt. Bert Lamb in the afternoon and picked up 184 rock. The largest was 4 pounds. The fish were taken in ship channel off Sharp's Light.

To Kick Winning Points

Who Says B.U. Isn't Sporting? It Loaned Terps' Dean a Tee

By Morris Siegel
Post Reporter

WHEN COACH BUFF DONELLI of Boston University hears about this he'll probably leap into the Charles River.

The kicking tee which Maryland's Bob Dean used to kick the all-important point after touchdown which gave the Terps a hair-thin victory over B. U. was borrowed from B. U.

Dean

The Maryland equipment manager forgot to take to Boston the tee which Dean uses, and when his oversight was discovered the red-faced manager borrowed a tee from the Terriers 10 minutes before kick-off time.

It was not a two-pronged tee of the type Dean used to kick 22 out of 27 points after touchdowns, but a disk-shaped tee. He placed a piece of adhesive tape on the rim for a marker and then proceeded to literally kick the Terriers to their first defeat of the season.

He converted successfully after Quarterback Joe Tucker had given Maryland a 6-0 lead in the second quarter. After Quarterback Stan Lavine had tied it at 13-13 in the hectic fourth period, Dean kicked the tie-breaking point.

Dean, a 6-foot, 200-pound tackle from Baldwin Township, Pa., became Maryland's place-kicker last fall after Tom McHugh had missed both attempts to convert in the Duke game, which the Blue Devils won, 13-12.

The tow-headed understudy to Ray Krouse had kicked off for the Terp jayvees in 1947, but never had tried to kick an extra point in his life until the following week, when he made good on six out of seven against George Washington. He was in from then on, kicking 11 out of 16.

This year he had 11 in a row before missing against George Washington in Maryland's 40-14 romp.

Cripps Asks Church To Shun Politics

To January, '51

British Steel Delay Voted In Commons

London, Nov. 16 (U.P.).—Commons tonight unanimously approved the Labor government's compromise delaying steel nationalization, but Conservative Leader Winston Churchill warned his party would wipe out the whole program if it won the next general election.

Churchill agreed not to oppose the government's amendments postponing the effective date of steel nationalization until January, 1951—well after the elections, which must be held some time before next August.

The compromise amendments delay the effective date of the steel bill and also the appointment of a "brain trust" to control the nationalized industry.

Meanwhile the Confederation of Engineering and Shipbuilding Unions, representing 2,500,000 workers, spurned the government's demand to defer claims for pay-increases.

London, Nov. 16 (AP).—Sir Stafford Cripps, Chancellor of the Exchequer, advised the Church of England today to stay out of the coming election contest.

Labor Party leaders have expressed concern at some recent statements by high churchmen on the country's economic position.

"The church should not attempt to devise remedies for particular social, economic or industrial evils," said Sir Stafford. That is the function of technicians such as politicians and administrators.

"We do not want politics in our religion, but we do want Christian standards in our politics."

He spoke to the laymen's section of the church assembly, the lawmaking group of the Church of England.

Some high churchmen recently have seemed to approve the idea of a coalition government, an idea rejected many times by labor leaders.

Eight D. C. Telephones Listed As Used to Call Up 'Snags'

The Government yesterday linked eight Washington telephones with bets taken by United States marshals March 25 during the raid on the Maryland headquarters of William (Snags) Lewis.

Deputy Marshal George H. Deakyne yesterday gave the District Court jury, trying Lewis and 13 others for gambling, five telephone numbers, which he said he had been given by would-be bettors while answering the telephone during the raid.

On Tuesday Deputy Marshal Edward J. Geraci gave the jury three numbers he said he was given while he answered the telephone during the raid.

Admitted He Phoned

Ralph Yates of the Chesapeake & Potomac Telephone Co. identified the Washington subscribers whose telephone numbers had been given to marshals as:

Robert L. Williams, 1313 12st st., nw., who testified Monday he was a numbers lottery writer who once called the Lewis headquarters at 4310 46th ave., Bladensburg, Md., in an effort to collect a numbers bet he had written; Sterling D. Welch, 4611 Verplank pl., nw., one of the defendants; Haroid Robinson, 1398 35th st., nw; Arthur L. Essex, 115 Hawaii ave., ne., whose wife, Helen, testified Monday she had placed a numbers bet with a deputy marshal at the Bladensburg bungalow on the day of the raid; Mary L. Townsend, 1723 Euclid st., nw.; the Super Liquor Store, 1633 N. Capitol st.; a basement telephone booth at the Raleigh Hotel, 12th st. and Pennsylvania ave. nw.; and a telephone booth on the 6th floor of the new Post Office Building at 12th st. and Pennsylvania ave., nw. Deakyne also gave the jury the numbers of two Maryland subscribers.

Deakyne testified yesterday that most of the callers with whom he talked "asked for 'Snags' and then asked what the number was for the day or wanted to make bets."

They Called 'Sugarpop'

"A lot of them also asked for 'Sugarpop.'" Deakyne added. Defendant Ellis L. Solet, 2805 Lee blvd., Arlington, Va., was identified in earlier testimony as 'Sugarpop.'"

Other callers asked for "Greaser," "Bunky" and "Collins," names not yet identified, Deakyne testified.

Earlier Deputy Marshal Francis McCathran testified also the personal property he had taken from two of the defendants.

He said he took from defendant Anis Wycke, 122 F st. nw., a card describing the numbers lottery, on the back of which was written "SNAG—UN. 6781." One of the telephones in the Bladensburg bungalow where Lewis was arrested is UNion 6781.

GROOM IT WITH KREML

TO AVOID "SCALP SCUM" AND MAKE HAIR LOOK NEAT

There's nothing better than Kreml to neatly groom thinning hair or sparse locks. Kreml doesn't look the least bit greasy, sticky or gooey. No scummy, dirt-catching film shows through on the scalp. Kreml always keeps hair and scalp looking and feeling so clean. AND SO VERY IMPORTANT—Kreml removes dandruff flakes (more noticeable with sparse hair); it lubricates a dry scalp, giving it a delightful tingle. Change to Kreml today.

Bears vs. Redskins

D. C. Finally Gets a Look At Lujack

By Bill Burnett
Post Reporter

After four years of hearing about his exploits, Washington gridiron fans will get their first view of Johnny Lujack in action Sunday when the former Notre Dame great leads the Chicago Bears against the Redskins at Griffith Stadium.

The fabulous All-America of 1946 and 1947, often called Notre Dame's greatest athlete of all time, will be featured in a game involving four brilliant quarterbacks.

Lujack himself will be matched against the Alabama's Harry Gilmer, pitching for the Redskins. It will be a contest between a second-year man, already the National Football League's top passer, and a promising first-year man who is is just finding himself professionally.

A second rivalry, now in its eleventh year, will pit the two greatest passers of all time. That could only be Slingin' Sammy Baugh, the Redskin man, against the Bears' Sid Luckman.

While it's Washington's first chance to see Lujack, it also may be Washington's last chance to see Luckman, the old Columbia ace who has furnished Baugh's toughest competition since 1939. Sid got off to a slow start this year, due to an operation, but now hopes to wind up his final pro season with his old-time flare.

The Bears, of course, will be well-favored, considering the records of both teams. Chicago still has high hopes of a Western Division title, but the Redskins are out of contention in the East.

Off the results of the teams' league game last year and a pre-season meeting this year in Memphis the Bears also hold an edge. In the first four minutes of the '48 contest Chicago took a 20-0 lead and coasted in. At Memphis in September the Bears, with Lujack hurling three touchdown passes, scored a 38-17 triumph.

8 G. W. Seniors End Careers In Hoya Game

By Herb Heft
Post Reporter

Eight George Washington seniors intend to make their last college football fling a memorable one Saturday when the Colonials play Georgetown at Griffith Stadium.

The entire right side of G.W.'s offensive line plays its last game as well as Fullback Al DuGoff, second leading scorer in the Southern Conference, Fullback Frank Cavallo who has place-kicked 11 out of 14 extra points, and Stan Burak, stellar blocking back.

Linemen who leave are Center Johnny Grinnell, Guards Dixie Howel and George Walley, Tackle Harvey Shipman and End Frank Close.

Grinnel and Howell, both former servicemen complete their fourth season of varsity play. Grinnell has played in 34 straight games, while Howell, last Saturday, missed his first in 34.

Shipman, 225 pounder, has been the heavyweight of G. W.'s squad for two seasons. Close has been the principal target of Tailback Andy Davis' passes for two seasons.

Walley, squat, blond-haired lad, came to GW last year after a short term at Potomac State College and blossomed forth as a line kingpin this season.

Grinnell, Howell and DuGoff are Washington area boys, hailing from Washington-Lee, Eastern and Roosevelt High Schools.

The lanky versatile Grinnell has moved back to halfback spot on defense, and saved the Colonials considerable embarrassment by intercepting five enemy aerials.

DuGoff, only 20, and an honor student, attracted attention in the VPI game when he scored four touchdowns, one on a 105-yard kickoff return. He broke up the Lafayette game in the fourth quarter with an 80-yard touchdown gallop.

Hoya Harriers Win Over W & M, 25-34

Cross-Country runners of Georgetown University hung up their sixth straight triumph yesterday, turning back William and Mary, 25-34, over the Hilltop course. Sam Lindsay of the Indians finished first in record time, 23 minutes 3.5 seconds, over the 4.4-mile course.

Gaming Case Dismissed by Commissioner

The transom peeper case came up again yesterday before United States Commissioner Cyril S. Lawrence.

Herman Brooks, 50, of 533 Peabody st. nw., owner of Brooks Laundry, and Florence Simmons, 43, his employe, of 523 3d st. ne., were charged with operating a lottery, setting up a gaming table, permitting gaming and possession of numbers slips. The charges were dismissed.

Detective Sergt. Howard E. Ogle of the Vice Squad told how he and Pvt. W. C. Clark, without a warrant, entered the laundry at 1114 H st. nw. on November 1 after a "reliable witness" had told them a felony was being committed there.

Ogle testified he and Clark were directed to the "marker room" to find Brooks. The door was ajar. They saw Brooks and Miss Simmons at tables on which were $55 in money, some numbers records, and a telephone. Neither was marking clothes, Ogle said.

Defense Attorney Denny K. Hughes piped up: "This is the MacDonald (transom peeper) case all over again."

The transome peeper case resulted in the clearing of Earl H. MacDonald of gaming charges when police arrested him without a warrant

Civil Service to Announce Transfer and Promotion Plan for High Levels

Civil Service soon will announce a transfer and promotion plan for high level employes. This is how it will work:

A register will be kept in the commission which will carry the names and records of top-flight administrative, executive and budget officers, information directors, personnel chiefs, etc.

This register will be used to promote and transfer employes to fill vacancies and new jobs. A central file of employes in high level jobs is not now available. As a result, a Civil Service official explained, "an agency with one or more of these positions to fill is likely to hire from outside the Government while the best qualified people to fill them are in Government but we don't know who they are and where they are located."

It's recalled that the Hoover Commission, in its personnel report, gave its support to an inter-agency tranfer and promotion plan. The proposal before the commission will be a big and important step in that direction.

APPEALS BOARD: The abolition of 358 War Assets jobs here by the end of this month is having a chain effect throughout the new General Services Administration.

Scores of employes are being bumped and demoted in the Buerau of Federal Supply, Public Building Administration and other GSA agencies. This is taking place because the law gives the WAA employes with permanent status job rights in the other GSA agencies.

Many appeals have and will be filed by employes who are being fired and demoted. These appeals normally go to Civil Service. However, GSA has decided to set up its own appeals board to hear the cases of all employes who believe they have been unfairly treated. The GSA appeals board probably will be headed by William Rehlaender, acting GSA personnel director, but its other members won't be personnel people who have been handling the reductions and demotions.

RFC: The Reconstruction Finance Corp. is still undecided whether to give its 4400 employes pay raises in line with the new pay-reclassification act. The agency must come under the law within six months. RFC is still reducing its force. Most other agencies in similar circumstances have granted pay boosts similar to those provided in the law to their employes.

GAO: Several of its offices are cracking down on employes who are suspected of abusing sick leave. Its transportation office, for example, won't recommend for promotion any employe who has less than 100 hours of accumulated sick leave.

CAPITOL HILL: Tom Graves, the able chief of the professional staff of the Senate Appropriations Committee, has resigned to become assistant executive director of the Connecticut Executive Expenditures Council. He was among the small group that was responsible for the recent 5 percent pay boost for Capitol Hill employes.

Charles Warren is celebrating his fiftieth anniversary as a Federal civil servant. He's superintendent of Postoffice's Division of Office Services. He has worked in the chief clerk's office there for 47 years . . . As one of his last official acts, retiring Patent Commissioner Lawrence Kingsland has urged the Civil Service Commission to upgrade the jobs of a number of patent examiners . . . Rear Admiral Gerald A. Eubank (retired) has been appointed special assistant to the president of the Prudential Insurance Co. He served here during the war . . . Budget Director Frank Pace will speak to the Society for the Advancement of Management at a dinner meeting at the YWCA on "The Application of the Hoover Commission Management Program by the Executive Branch." You're invited.

NOTES: At the Bureau of Standards, new staff members are Max M. Lee, Dr. Richard N. Work, and Dr. Robert S. Marvin . . . At Housing & Home Finance, Benjamin Glassberg and Gordon E. Howard have been transferred to the new division of slum clearance and urban development . . . Friday night is "fun night" for AFGE's lodges within the Federal Security Agency. The affair will be held in the auditorium of FSA's North Building . . . A drive to enlist the 2400 Civil Service painters into the Brotherhood of Painters, Decorators, and Paperhangers will be kicked off at an "open house" at 1606 Rhode Island ave. ne. the evening of December 9.

Bonds Only Way, Census On Schools Indicates

P-TA Survey Expected To Show New High In Pupil Load for Falls Church Area

Preliminary statistics from a school census in the Falls Church area show that "the proposed city-county bond issues are the only possible way in which the Falls Church community and Fairfax County can escape a school crisis, Falls Church P-TA President Robert Cullum said yesterday.

The census of children through 19 years of age was conducted by the Falls Church P-TA in the areas served at present by the Madison-Jefferson and Oak st. schools. Though final tabulations of the survey has not been made, Cullum said the preliminary figures were released on Falls Church itself to give city residents information before they vote on a $700,000 school construction loan this Saturday.

The preliminary figures make it "a virtual certainty" that final statistics will show "a new all-time high" for total school population in the area, Cullum said.

The tentative figures show a 1950 junior-senior high school enrollment of 433 students in the 7 through 12 grades. The number of high school students living within Falls Church will increase to 480 by 1951, the census shows.

A heavy increase in primary enrollments within the next few years is indicated by the survey, which shows a total Falls Church pre-school population of 1381 children through 5 years of age.

This indicates an average of "something like 200 new pupils a year" in the first grade for the next six years. Present combined enrollment in first grades at the Oak Street and Madison Jefferson schools is about 110 pupils, according to School Superintendent Irvin Schmitt.

Board Votes to Insure 2 Schools for $272,500

The Falls Church school board voted last night to insure its Madison and Jefferson school buildings for $272,500 at a cost of $927 a year.

The buildings have been covered for the past few months, since Falls Church acquired them from Fairfax County, by a temporary binder policy. The policy which covers fire damage only is carried by Thomas J. Fisher Co., Washington.

The Madison school building is insured for $175,000 with an additional $15,000 on its two prefabricated annexes, and another $15,000 on building contents. The Jefferson school building is insured for $50,000, its annex for $7500 and its contents for $10,000.

Another $2800 is carried on the school board offices at 1037 Broad st.

The school board also voted to pay off a temporary $10,000 loan made last spring to cover operating costs until tax receipts were received by the city.

School Board To Seek Pay Restoration

The Board of Education announced yesterday it will seek legislation to restore pay cuts amounting to as much as $300 for 35 temporary teachers in the District.

The cuts resulted from legislation approved by Congress which adjusted the amount of experience that would be credited in salary placement. The teachers would receive the higher pay this year but would be reduced next year.

Mrs. Ruth E. Glennon, president of the Congress Heights Parent-Teacher Association, urged the board to amend its 1951 budget requests to include construction funds for a new elementary school in the Congress Heights area. The board asked for site money only.

Mrs. Glennon said that construction of more than three thousand apartment units in the area justify consideration of a new school building.

The board approved a program of bringing six out-of-town educators to the city to provide an in-service training program for teachers.

They are Dr. Glenn O. Blough, specialist in elementary education for the United States Office of Education; Dr. Allison Davis, professor of education at the University of Chicago; Dr. Foster E. Grossnickle, professor of education, New Jersey State Teachers College; Miss Madelaine Mershon, consultant, Department of Child Study, University of Maryland, Professor Edgar Bruse Wesley, University of Minnesota, and Miss Mary Alice Adams, assistant superintendent of schools, Baltimore.

Two teachers with long records of service were retired:

Mrs. Rosetta O. Robinson, 1131 Girard st. nw.; teacher at Garfield Elementary School, after 45 years.

Clarence B. Ingram, 18 53rd pl. ne., teacher of mathematics at Shaw Junior High School, after 40 years.

Dog, Owner Given Stay Of Eviction

The Municipal Court of Appeals ruled yesterday that Smacker, a Cairn terrier, and his owner can stay in their apartment until a jury says they must get out.

Judge Milton S. Kronheim of Municipal Court said recently that Smacker violated the rental lease and ruled that the landlord, Weaver, Bros., Inc., was entitled to possession of the apartment.

The Appeals Court said Judge Kronheim was wrong.

Smacker is owned by R. C. Newlin, an accountant residing in apartment 101, 2616 39th st. nw. The dog is 4 years old and Newlin says the animal is "well behaved." He also said that unless he could have a dog, "which was as much a part of his family as any human . . . he did not want the apartment."

It was under these terms, the Appeals Court declared, that Newlin moved in. Newlin said that Weaver's maintenance manager knew the dog during the past few years was in the apartment and didn't object until January of this year and accepted rent after that.

In the court's opinion, written by Judge Brice Clagett, it is stated that since the landlord hadn't objected during the period of years, he couldn't object now.

Weaver's attorneys argued that the presence was a "continuing breach" of the contract such as a failure to make repairs under a contract.

As to this, Claget writes, "without indulging in sentiment on the subject, we do not believe that keeping a particular dog to which a family may have become attached can be compared to failure to make repairs in violation of a covenant that they shall be made.

Bringing Cruise Ships Here to Be Discussed

Louis F. Bohraus, chairman of the Washington Board of Trade's river and harbor committee, will discuss plans for the Southwest broadcast today for Joseph Bowen, of bringing cruise ships to Washington at a meeting of the Southwest Businessmen's Association this evening.

The association will meet at 7:30 p. m. at the Southwest Branch of the American Security and Trust Co., 7th and E sts. sw.

Case Dismissed

Court Bars Confession Of Slaying

A second-degree murder case was dismissed here yesterday after the defendant's confession, obtained by police 19 hours after his arrest, was declared illegal.

Judge Richmond B. Keech of District Court ruled that without the inadmissible confession, there was insufficient evidence to convict William C. Jones, 39, of 1620 4th st. nw. He had been accused of the fatal stabbing of William Nuttingham, 35, of the same address.

Defense Attorney Milton Kaplan argued Jones was held by police for the 19 hours purely to "extract" the confession from him.

Judge Keech declared that the period of arrest and questioning was unreasonable. The decision is in line with recent high court condemnations of prolonged detention for questioning.

Nuttingham was stabbed at around 11 p. m. July 2 near New Jersey ave. and P st. nw. Jones was arrested around 2 a. m. the next morning.

It was stipulated that the defendant was too intoxicated to be questioned for several hours. Police, beginning at 9 a. m. July 3, interrogated Jones for at least two hours, and at 6 p. m. that evening began anew. The confession was signed about three hours later.

Complainant Ill, Rape Case Is Dismissed

A rape indictment against two men was dismissed yesterday when the complainant, a 30-year-old Government employe, failed to appear in District Court for the trial.

The men accused were Beaman Heath, 24, of 540 20th st., Arlington, Va., and Oakley J. Powers, 29, who formerly resided at 1723 G st. nw.

Assistant United States Attorney John C. Conliff told the court that the complaining witness had written that she was under a doctor's care and too ill to endure testifying in the case.

Judge Alexander Holtzoff directed the dismissal.

$200,000 Given GWU Cancer Unit

Public Health Grant To Assure Start Of New Hospital On 23d St. Site

A $200,000 grant was awarded George Washington University yesterday to assure start of the school's long-planned cancer hospital.

The fund, awarded by Public Health Service's National Cancer Institute, will supplement $350,000 long earmarked for such a project by the Warwick Memorial, at the time of its affiliation of cancer clinic services with GWU.

Details of the new hospital and research building were made public by Dr. Cloyd H. Marvin, GWU president, to supplement a brief announcement by the Federal Security Administrator of 12 Nation-wide grants totaling $2,174,900 for construction of cancer research facilities. GWU's share was $250,000.

The additional $50,000 awarded GWU, it was explained, will be used for alterations to the university's old hospital, at 1339 H st. nw., to accommodate more laboratories there for continuing cancer research projects.

Dr. Marvin said construction of the initial units of what is hoped will eventually be a more ambitious project is well in its planning stage.

The building will be erected on the doctors' parking lot, across 23rd st. from the hospital, between New Hampshire ave. and K st. nw.

Woman Kills Self, Blames It on 'Devil'

Saying "no one is to blame except the devil," a 24-year-old mother yesterday committed suicide in her Calvert Manor apartment in Accookek, Md., Prince Georges County police said last night.

Police said the victim, Mrs. Jean Helene Shifflett, mother of a four-months-old daughter, was found about 4 p. m. yesterday by a neighbor, Mrs. Patsy Wilson. Mrs. Shifflett was lying on a bed, face down with her throat slashed by a razor blade, police said. She was clad only in a slip.

Prince Georges County Medical Examiner John T. Maloney issued a certificate of suicide last night. He said Mrs. Shifflett probably took her life about noon yesterday.

A note pencilled on an envelop said: "I took my own life. No one is to blame except the devil. Don't blame Paul. Paul, take good care of the baby."

Paul Robert Shifflett, 30, is the victim's husband, according to Detective John Siddall of the Maryland State Police at Marlboro, who conducted the investigation.

He is a Naval Research scientist working at a nearby Maryland installation, Mrs. Shifflett's family said last night.

Parade Snarls Circle Traffic

In the wake of the parade for the Shah of Iran yesterday afternoon, traffic was seriously clogged at Washington Circle from about 4:30 p. m. to about 6:30 p. m.

This was reported by Capital Transit to be the "hot spot" in the downtown traffic slowup caused by rerouting made necessary by the parade. Streetcars and buses throughout the downtown area were stymied for as long as a half an hour, Capital Transit officials said.

The Third Police Precinct detailed some six extra men to untangle the Washington Circle snarl. Capital Transit spokesmen said police did an "excellent job of trying to funnel too many autos through too small an artery."

With Regret

Court Backs School Ouster Of Blind Man

Judge Jennings Bailey ruled with "regret" yesterday that the Columbia Polytechnic Institute for the Blind may oust French S. Hufty, its former vice president, from the school premises at 1808 H st. nw.

The District Court jurist decided that Hufty, who is 67 years old and completely blind, must leave despite his 38 years of "invaluable service" for the institution. The attorneys are to meet this morning to arrange care for Hufty.

The school obtained a court declaration that Hufty must leave after evidence was introduced that he had resigned in 1948 and yet continued to interfere in school affairs.

The controversy over Hufty, officials said, had jeopardized contracts with the Veterans Administration for trainees.

Judge Bailey said:

"Any interference with the operation of the plaintiff's (Columbia's) corporation would be irreparable. By his presence, by his express views and by his occupation of the premises, the defendant has interfered. It is not a question of whether the trustees of the plaintiff are acting wisely, for that question is not before the court . . . I hope that before I sign the order in this case, the parties will make some arrangement suitable to Mr. Hufty. If they cannot, I will have to sign the order anyway. In such event, I hope there will be a prompt appeal. I hope the whole matter can be prosecuted to a conclusion before the charter expires."

Daniel Partridge, one of the trustees, then asked the court to decide what the school should do for Hufty. Julius Aronoff, Hufty's lawyer, joined in the request, and Judge Bailey said the attorneys should meet in his chambers.

Frederick A. Ballard was attorney for the school.

CTC Claims Pay Outpaces Cost of Living

Capital Transit Co. workers' wages have risen faster than the cost of living since 1940 and are above the average for Government employes, the firm told an arbitration board yesterday.

Hawley Simpson, company labor counsel, declared the cost of living rose 66 percent since 1940 while CTC wage rates went up 88 per cent.

He added that the cost of living dropped from 1 to 2 percent in the period from May 1948 to May 1949 and this should be considered in making the wage award since in the past the union had justified pay boost requests because of increased cost of living.

Simpson said the average salary of 798,052 Government workers under the Classification Act is $3315 a year, compared to an average of $3339 paid to CTC union employes. An additional 473,249 Government workers not under the act receive an average of $2760 a year, he said.

I. B. Goad, director of schedules and traffic for the firm, told the five-man board that although bus and streetcar operators are out on the street an average of 7 hours, 10 minutes a day, they receive pay for 8 hours, 31 minutes. The additional time is spent in preparing vehicles and reports.

The arbitration continues today at 9:30 a. m. at the Hamilton Hotel.

Special Jury Investigating Gambling Is Disbanded

36 Indictments Returned in Year And a Half; Report Ordered Sealed

Washington's first special grand jury to investigate gambling disbanded yesterday, 18 months after it was impaneled to examine what United States Attorney George Morris Fay described as a 100-million-dollar-a-year racket.

The jurors delivered a "presentment" to Judge Alexander Holtzoff in District Court and were warned by him that "the seal of secrecy is permanent" on all proceedings and testimony before them.

Judge Holtzoff also directed that the presentment "be sealed for the time being," presumably because 14 men indicted by the grand jury are now standing trial.

Silent to Questions

Fay, who filed a 1000-word petition with District Court on April 27, 1948 for such a jury, yesterday refused to answer any questions about its accomplishments. Reporters received "No comment," when they asked him how often the jury met, how many witnesses they heard, how much money it had cost, and whether he was satisfied.

During its 18 months existence permitted by law, the jury returned indictments against 36 men, two of whom have died subsequently. The indictment against one man has been dropped, as a result of his conviction in a Virginia court. Trials for the 19 others beside the present 14 defendants are pending.

The special jury has met less than half a dozen times since the 36 men were indicted in April, when the first draft of the presentment given to Judge Holtzoff yesterday was made, according to official sources.

Fay himself, and his two assistants, John W. Fihelly and William Hitz, who is now prosecuting William "Snags" Lewis and 13 other indicted gamblers, made all the presentments to the grand jury.

The jury was composed of Government clerks, housewives, engineers, a broker, a telephone operator, a messenger, a teacher of religion, a dental technician and a saleswoman. They received $5 a day when they were in session. J. Donald Halsted, 54, a buyer of municipal bonds, employed by the B. J. Van Ingen Co. of New York City was named foreman by Judge David A. Pine in May, 1948.

The grand jury was given authority to call witnesses from anywhere in the country. A list of 173 big-time gamblers was given the jury by the Metropolitan Police Department. Robert J. Barrett, superintendent of police with whom Fay has feuded on the subject of gambling prevention, appeared personally before the jury.

Perhaps the most colorful witness before the jury was red-headed former waitress Bernice Franklin. Once a friend of those familiar with local sporting figures, Miss Franklin supplied the jury with much of the information which led to the raids in March.

In addition to Halsted, the jurors were Arthur D. Anderson, 324 E st. ne.; John Andrews, 335 K st. se.; Mrs. Dorothy Hamilton Ball, 743 Varnum st. nw.; Mrs. Ruth Overstreet Bidinger, 2106 Huidekoper pl. nw.; Miss Madeline Botts, 3608 20th st. ne.; Mrs. Thelma Caylor, 4620 45th st. nw.; William M. Everhart, 2612 Hamlin st. ne.; Mrs. Jacqueline Glover, 5308 7th st. nw.; Nathaniel Hedgman, 1130 48th pl. ne.; Miss Anna Helfgott, 4709 9th st. nw.; Charles V. Hemm, 1433 Morse st. ne.; John J. Hughes, 3819 W st. nw.; Mrs. Selma Klein, 5265 Nebraska ave. nw.; Bernard Lyons, 1400 Longfellow st. nw.; Loye Lee Massey, 4105 Wisconsin ave. nw.; Mrs. Irene Page, 1700 U st. nw.; Barne J. Sigurdson, 1254 Owen pl. ne.; John T. Tucker, 2216 Randolph st. ne.; Arthur K. Vance, 120 Ridge rd. se.; Mrs. Juanita P. Warner, 235 56th st. ne., and Mrs. Mamie L. Coons, 1435 Montana ave. ne.

Downtown Businessmen Schedule Meeting To Plan Pageant, Night Hours to Boost Trade

All downtown-area merchants have been invited to a meeting at the Chicken Hut Restaurant, 427 11th st. nw., Monday at noon to make plans for Thursday night store hours and a Christmas season pageant and parade.

Plans were made yesterday by a Federation of Businessmen's Associations committee headed by Sid Bertram, owner of Bertram's Pipe Shop.

Bertram proposed the two projects as a means of building up lagging downtown business volume and keep the section from becoming a "blighted area" of shuttered stores.

The federation adopted the proposals and another by Bertram recommending development of underground parking as a means of combating commercial area decen ralization into neighboring suburbs.

The federation's three-point program was hailed by William H. Press, executive secretary of the Washington Board of Trade, as another step in the attack on loss of business and tax revenues downtown.

The executive secretary of the Merchants and Manufacturers' Federation, Edward D. Shaw, said parades usually hinder rather than help business, and underground parking has proven "very expensive."

P. M. Talbot, general manager of Woodward & Lothrop and head of the M & M department store group, said Thursday night store hours are not necessary since Government workers may shop on Saturdays and business volume is holding up except for some decline caused by unseasonal fall weather.

Bradbury Citizens Ask Southeast H St. Paving

The Bradbury Heights Citizens Association last night went on record favoring the paving of H st., from 44th pl. to Burns st. se., and Burns st., from H st. to Texas ave.

A petition of request was addressed to the District Highway Commission, and a committee consisting of Earl J. Robinson, 800 Ridge rd. se., and James Bastek, 1134 Chaplin st. se., was appointed to work with the Adelaide Davis School Parent-Teachers Association on the project. The meeting was at the Adelaide Davis School, 44th and H sts. se.

Lincoln Unit Opposes Driver Training Fund

The Lincoln Civic Association last night disapproved the $39,300 in 1951 public school budget earmarked for training high school students in driving motor vehicles.

The group, meeting at the Frances Junior High School, 24th and N sts. nw., unanimously opposed the inclusion of the item in the budget, saying that the money could better be used for the proper enforcement of school attendance laws and teaching of fundamentals.

Other action included the backing of Attorney Huver I. Brown for president of the Federation of Civic Associations.

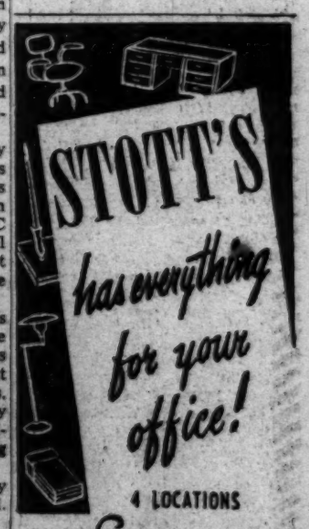
Trinidad Elects Father, Daughter to Offices

The Trinidad Citizens Association last night reelected James W. Thatcher, of 1145 19th st. ne., president, and elected his daughter, Miss Emily Thatcher, secretary.

The Thatchers were unopposed in the election, held at the Wheatley School, Montello ave. and Neal st. ne. Miss Thatcher has been serving as acting secretary.

Mrs. L. N. Selby was reelected vice president and Walter J. Wondrack was chosen treasurer.

The association also voted to address an inquiry to the District Government as to why some insurance companies operating in the District refuse automobile insurance to persons 21 years of age, who are mentally and physically fit and of good reputation.



U. S. Official Slain By Fellow Hunter

Grant G. Thompson, 43-year-old Agriculture Department Division Chief of 4510 Ellicott st. nw., was mortally wounded late Tuesday in a hunting accident in Maine.

Thompson

Mr. Thompson, member of a hunting party, was shot by Edwin Canlong-time field of Norristown, Pa., a friend Deputy Sheriff John Gallant of Somerset County, Me., said. Canfield, who thought he saw a deer, fired his rifle. The bullet hit Mr. Thompson, concealed by underbrush, and pierced an artery in his groin. He died 10 minutes later.

Relatives said Mr. Thompson had gone hunting for several years with the other members of the party.

The men had been hunting since Monday and Canfield was the only one who had not bagged his deer.

The accident occurred in rugged country near Moosehead Lake. The body was taken to Bingham, from where it was to be sent to Ithaca, Mich. for burial.

Mr. Thompson, a Washington resident since 1938, was chief of the feed grain section, Production Marketing Administration of the Agriculture Department.

A native of Ithaca, Mich., he farmed there until he became a committee of the old Agricultural Adjustment Administration, a member of the Michigan State post he held from 1935 to 1938.

He is survived by his wife, Mrs. Velma Thompson, and a daughter, Jean, 5. The family plans to leave here Thursday morning for Ithaca.

Jackson Hunting Death Is Ruled an Accident

A certificate of accidental death was issued yesterday by Dr. Frank J. Broschart, Montgomery County medical examiner, in the hunting death of Harry Jackson Tuesday near Holly Grove.

Jackson, 20, of Route 2, Silver Spring, was fatally wounded when he received a shotgun blast in the right shoulder while hunting with four companions.

According to police, he was wounded when one of the five weapons was discharged while the party was climbing through a fence. Jackson was pronounced dead on arrival at Montgomery General Hospital a half hour later.

Heart Attack Kills Lawyer While Hunting

Lemuel Oliver, 54-year-old Baltimore attorney who has been a member of the District Bar since 1926, suffered a heart attack while hunting Tuesday in Dorchester County, Md., and died a few minutes later.

His Wife Died

Colonel Wars On Medical Accidents

An Army officer stationed here, whose wife died recently under operating anesthesia, yesterday announced formation of an unincorporated Society for the Prevention of Medical Accidents.

He is Lieut. Col. Gordon L. Barclay, of the Army's personnel and administrative division. His wife, Mary Johnson Barclay, 42, died on October 10 in Walter Reed General Hospital.

Purpose of his society, Colonel Barclay said, will be to seek out statistically and by affidavits the numbers and types of deaths linked to medical accidents, and to sponsor research towards preventing them.

Maj. Gen. Paul H. Streit, commanding the Army Medical Center, said of Mrs. Barclay's death:

"This was an anesthetic death, the cause of which could not be determined even after a very thorough investigation."

Since the cause could not be determined, he added, the death cannot be labeled either "accidental" or "preventable."

The death certificate itself lists primary cause as "cardio respuratory failure," or simply failure of the heart and lungs to continue functioning. It is further annotated under remarks of the physician with "death during administration of gas oxygen prior to ether."

A hospital spokesman said Walter Reed has had but two anesthetic deaths in 55,000 inductions. Hospitals with more than one death for each 5000 inductions fail to receive approval of the American College of Surgeons, certifying board for hospital operations.

Officer's Death Accident, Says Walter Reed

Walter Reed Hospital authorities yesterday disputed a suicide finding by the District coroner in the drowning of Lieut. Col. Jack H. Tyler, whose body was found in a hospital swimming pool November 10.

"All evidence in our opinion does not support a diagnosis of suicide, but one of accidental death due to drowning," a statement from Maj. Gen. Paul H. Streit, commanding officer of the Army Medical Center, said in part.

"The data on which this opinion is based is being forwarded to the District of Columbia coroner."

Dr. A. Magruder MacDonald, the coroner, said yesterday he had not yet received the data but declared:

"If it turns out there is a conflict between the testimony given by witnesses to the Army Board of Inquiry and that given to police here, we will re-interview the witnesses, and, if the facts warrant, change the verdict from suicide to accidental death."

Colonel Tyler's body was found, with the head wedged under the first rung of the pool ladder at the eight-foot mark after he went swimming with a group.

A relative said he had been admitted to Walter Reed for treatment of a back ailment and swimming was part of the treatment.

Colonel Tyler lived at 110 N. Thomas st., Arlington, Va.

County Asks Falls Church Share Debt

Falls Church officials yesterday confirmed reports that Fairfax County has proposed the city assume from $188,000 to $240,000 of the county's total school bond indebtedness of $2,400,000.

The demand was made at an informal conference of city and county representatives to work out a financial adjustment following Falls Church's acquisition of second-class status in August 1948.

The conference, held last Monday and Tuesday and now adjourned or about two weeks, included representatives of both school boards, the Falls Church city council, the county board of supervisors, Falls Church and Fairfax school superintendents, Fairfax Commonwealth Attorney Hugh Marsh and Falls Church City Attorney LaRue VanMeter.

Fairfax made its demand under authority of the Virginia code, which provided that when a town assumes city status, the city shall reimburse the county for "a just and reasonable proportion of any debt of such county existing at the date the town became a city."

Both Falls Church and Fairfax officials yesterday said they thought the door was open for further compromise on the financial settlement.

Fairfax Commonwealth Attorney Marsh said he believed the figures mentioned "are not a final proposition."

Falls Church Councilman Lee M. Rhoads, chairman of the council's finance committee, said, "My feelng is we can work things out accross the table."

Falls Church might agree to pay "a very small amount" of the figure Fairfax is asking, according to Rhoads. He pointed out the city has already assumed the $50,000 indebtedness of the Madison-Jefferson School, which it took over from Fairfax.

Funeral Rites Set Today for T. T. Luckett

Funeral services for Thomas Taylor Luckett, 97, who attended every presidential inauguration from James Buchanan's in 1857 to the third inauguration of Franklin D. Roosevelt in 1941, will be held today at 2 p. m. in the Hines funeral home, 2901 14th st. nw. Burial will be in Congressional Cemetery.

Mr. Luckett

Mr. Luckett, one of Washington's oldest residents, died Monday at his home, 2703 Woodley rd. nw., after an illness of several years.

Born near Stanton Park on March 24, 1852, he delivered newspapers before President Lincoln took office. Later he sold the National Intelligencer on the streets, became an office boy, then press feeder on the National Republican. He was in the real estate business for many years and later entered the Department of Agriculture, from which he retired in 1931 after 15 years' service.

On his ninetieth birthday he was honored by Lafayette lodge for 63 years as a Scottish Rite Mason. He was also affiliated with the Columbia Commandery, Knights Templar, Eureka Chapter, Royal Arch Masons, Almas Temple of the Mystic Shrine and Kallipolis Grotto.

He is survived by a daughter, Miss Ella Luckett, who lived with him; five granddaughters, Mrs. William J. Connors, Mrs. Clark Davis, Mrs. George Wright, Miss Lorraine Luckett and Mrs. Ruth Constantini, and a great-granddaughter, Miss Patricia Anne Connors, all of Washington.

J. J. Costinett Burial Rites Set for Friday

Funeral services for John J. Costinett, 84, a manufacturing tailor in Washington since 1885, will be held at 3:30 p. m. Friday at the Hines funeral home, 14th and Harvard sts. nw.

Mr. Costinett

Burial, which will be private, will be in Cedar Hill Cemetery.

Mr. Costinett died Tuesday at George Washington Hospital.

A native of the District, he set himself up in business at 20. For 40 years he had conducted his business and lived at 1212 New York ave. nw.

Mr. Costinett was a major in the Minute Men, a semimilitary organization of the past. He was one of a committee of the Minute Men who escorted the American Flag to Potsdam, Germany, in 1913, when a statue of Von Steuben was unveiled.

President Grover Cleveland appointed him a captain in the National Guard.

Mr. Costinett was a member of the Knights of Pythias and the following Masonic organizations: Columbia Chapter, Royal Arch Masons; Adoniram Council, Columbia Commandry; Almas Temple and the Masonic Veterans' Association.

He also was the oldest member of Dawson Lodge, No. 16, FAAM.

He is survived by his wife, Mrs. Grace Lankau Costinett, and a brother, Joseph R. Costinett, Hyattsville, Md.

Mrs. Uhl Dead; Retired Civil Service Worker

Mrs. Anna J. Uhl, 82, retired cival service worker, died at her home, 2721 Cortland pl. now., Tuesday after an illness of several weeks.

A native of Milmine, Platt County, Ill., Mrs. Uhl had been a resident of the District since 1919. She was a clerk in the service records section of the Civil Service Commission when she retired in 1937, after 17 years with the bureau.

Active in church and civic circles, Mrs. Uhl was a member of Court District of Columbia No. 212, Catholic Oaughters of America, she was also a Red Cross volunteer worker during the war, and a parishioner of the Church of St. Thomas the Apostle, Woodley rd. and 27th st. nw.

to be issued under the authority of Chapter 122 of the 1918 Laws of Maryland, as amended, for water main and sewer construction.

$500,000 Storm Water Drainage Bonds, maturing annually, December 1, without option of prior payment, $15,000 in each of the years 1950 to 1958, inclusive, $20,000 in each of the years 1959 to 1965, inclusive, and $25,000 in each of the years 1966 to 1974, inclusive; to be issued under the authority of Chapter 540 of the 1949 Laws of Maryland and Chapter 526 of the 1943 Laws of Maryland, as amended by Chapter 917 of the 1945 Laws of Maryland, for constructing storm water drainage systems.

Denomination $1,000; principal and semiannual interest (J and D) payable at Prince Georges Bank and Trust Company, Hyattsville, Maryland, or at the principal office of The Equitable Trust Company, Baltimore, Maryland, or at the principal office of Chemical Bank & Trust Company, New York City, New York, at holder's option; general obligations; unlimited tax; coupon bonds registerable as to principal alone; exempt from taxation by the state of Maryland and by the counties and municipalities in said State; unconditionally guaranteed as to both principal and interest by Montgomery and Prince Georges Counties by indorsement on each bond. There will be no auction. Bonds will be delivered about December 15, 1949, at place of purchaser's choice.

Bidders are requested to name the interest rate or rates for the Water Supply Bonds and the General Construction Bonds, not exceeding 4% per annum, in multiples of ¼ or 1/10 of 1%, and each bidder must specify in his bid the amount and the maturities of the bonds of each rate. No bid may name more than one interest rates for the bonds of either of these issues, and the bonds of either issue maturing on the same date must bear interest at the same rate.

Bidders are requested to name the interest rate for the Storm Water Drainage Bonds, not exceeding 4% per annum, in a multiple of ¼ or 1/10 of 1%, and no bid may name more than one rate for the bonds of this issue.

A separate bid for ecah issue (not less than par and accrued interest) is required, but no bid for less than all of the bonds offered will be entertained. Each bid for the bonds will be awarded to the bidder offering to purchase the bonds at the lowest interest cost to the District, such interest to be determined by deducting the total amount of the premium bid from the aggregate amount of interest upon all of the bonds from their date until their respective maturities.

Each proposal must be on a form to be furnished by the undersigned, inclosed in a sealed envelope marked "Proposal for Bonds," and must be accompanied by a certified check upon an incorporated bank or trust company, payable unconditionally to the order of the Washington Suburban Sanitary Commission, for $70,000. Award or rejection of bids will be made on the date above stated for receipt of bids, and the checks of unsuccessful bidders will be returned immediately. The check of the successful bidder will be held uncashed as security for the performance of his bid, but in the event the successful bidder shall fail to comply with the terms of his bid, the check may then be cashed and the proceeds thereof retained as and for full liquidated damages.

The approving opinion of Messrs. Mitchell and Pershing, New York City, will be furnished the purchasers without cost.

In Memoriam

BURRUTO, TERESA. In loving memory of our mother who passed away November 17, 1943.
How much we miss you, you must know.
Without these words to tell you so;
But we can't let the day go by
Without remembering with a sigh.
It's the saddest day of all the year,
The day Death came and took you, dear.
MARY AND MIKE DI LORENZO.

QUEEN, JAMES C. In loving memory of Capt. James C. Queen, who lost his life in a plane crash over Iwo Jima, November 19, 1945.
We do not need a special day,
To bring you to our mind,
The days we do not think of you,
Are very hard to find.
God set you down a wonderful son and brother,
One of the very best.
It was a sad and sudden call,
Of one so dearly loved by all.
Devoted Mother, Sister and Brother.

Soroptimists See Holiday Fashion Show

THE FASHION show craze caught up with members of the Soroptimist Club yesterday when they held their annual Inter-Civic luncheon in the Congressional Room at the Willard Hotel.

Frothy holiday dresses, tailored suits, coats, fur wraps and bright, new hats figured in the show that highlighted the program honoring guests from other civic organizations. Among the groups represented were the Business and Professional, Quota, Zonta and Pilot Clubs.

The fashion show was presented by Zirkin's, with hats by Elies, Connecticut ave. designer.

GLAMOROUS gift suggestions, cluding furs, jewels and hostess gowns, will be modeled at today's luncheon-meeting of the Washington Fashion Group at the Washington Hotel.

Miss Dorine Liebert, outstanding designer of lounge wear, will come down from New York to be honor guest at the affair, as will Miss Marguerite Donohue, who will speak on costume jewelry trends of the season. Furs to be shown are by Joseph DeLeo, also of New York, who becadse of illness will not be present.

Six Million Children Fed, Clothed by UN Fund

By Genevieve Reynolds and Nicha Soure

PRESIDENT TRUMAN was advised by the United Nations International Children's Emergency Fund yesterday that more than six million children around the world have been provided with food, clothing and medical care.

The Chief Executive received the first report to the people of America by the United States Committee of UNICEF in a brief ceremony at the White House.

Mrs. Oswald B. Lord, chairman of the committee, presented President Truman with the report in the presence of Katharine Lenroot, United States Delegate to the UNICEF; Secretary of Defense Louis Johnson, who is also a member of the United States Committee; Undersecretary of State James Webb and Dallas Dort of the Department of State.

The report states that the UNICEF has provided more than two billion meals for hungry children abroad during the past two years, as well as millions of pounds of dried skim milk, fish liver oil and other high-vitamin foods.

President Lauds Fund

LAUDING the fund's work, President Truman said, "The report tells the dramatic story of a great humanitarian effort to meet the emergency needs of children growing out of the war. I note that this is entitled 'Consider These Children.' These three words convey a message I would like to send across the land."

The President also received the first print of a one-reel film "For All the World's Children," produced by Warner Pathe News for the United States Committee which will be shown to Americans in local theaters.

All phases of the UNICEF's operations are shown in the film, including the distribution of supplies from the United States, Australia, Canada and Latin America, and feeding operations in Europe and the Middle and Far East. In addition, sequences are devoted to UNICEF's medical program, such as malaria control and antituberculosis vaccination.

Reports on Nurse Equality

ALL except five States and the District of Columbia admit Negro nurses into local associations on a non-segregated basis, Mrs. Mabel Staupers told members of the National Council of Negro Women yesterday.

Reporting at the council's 14th annual meeting in the Labor Department Auditorium, she said that the D. C. Graduate Nurses Association would be urged to alter its membership rules so as to include Negro graduates.

According to Mrs. Staupers, the five State nurses' associations which bar Negroes are South Carolina, Georgia, Virginia, Louisiana and Texas. However, the American Nurses Association admits individual graduate nurses from those States. Associations in Alabama and Arkansas admitted Negroes as recently as last week.

There's increasing voting participation by Negro women throughout the South, reported Mrs. Arenia Mallory of Lexington, Miss., director of the council's Region Four which includes Alabama, Arkansas, Florida, Louisiana, Mississippi and Texas.

Voting Increase Shown

MRS. MALLORY said that increased voting by Negro women was reflected in State elections on November 8. Specifically, she referred to Louisiana. In the town of Minden, where one year ago a Negro was lynched, Council members went to the polls in a body and helped to elect a new sheriff. An educational program conducted by the Council throughout that section of the State offset any friction.

Mrs. Mattie Coasey of Baltimore, reporting for Maryland, Kentucky, Ohio, Virginia and the District of Columbia also told how council members had stepped up their voting. Mass meetings were held in Louisville and Richmond, to which political candidates were invited to explain their positions on Civil Rights. Mrs. Coasey said that the Virginia Councils helped to defeat a proposed Constitutional amendment pertaining to poll taxes in that State on the grounds that it would curtail the number of Negro voters who might qualify.

In Cincinnati, women helped to elect two Negroes to the city council. With the support of council members in Cleveland, Miss Jean Capers, a local attorney and a Negro was elected to the City Council .

Outlined Action Procedures

MRS. VERNICE SPRAGGS, chairman of the citizenship committee, outlined procedures for influencing action on passage of civil rights legislation. Delegates were advised to contact Representatives and Senators in their home States to obtain commitments on such measures as anti-lynching, anti-poll taxes, fair employment practices and the omnibus civil rights measure which would eliminate Jim Crow laws in inter-State transportation.

New officers will be nominated at today's session. It will be the first time the Council has elected new officers in seven years. In 1942 the organization changed its constitution to make Dr. Mary McLeod Bethune, founder, a life president. Social highlight of the day's events will include visits to the Embassies of Great Britain, Mexico, India, Israel, Haiti and Ethiopia, where tea will be served by women of the embassy staffs.

That Long, Long Trail A-Winding Gives Visiting Decorator Her Unique Job

By Lucia Brown

IF YOU want to make your "land yacht" a home, keep colors bright but not overpowering, watch out for those oversized patterns, and don't forget the "little touches"!

That's advice from Mrs. Julia Staley, only woman decorator in the United States who devotes all her time to trailers. She works for a Chicago manufacturing firm, is here in Washington for the Trailer Coach Industry Exhibit at National Guard Armory.

Slender, smart-looking Mrs. Staley used to decorate regular houses with rooms maybe 14 by 18 feet, but these look pretty big to her nowadays. For more than two years, she's been concentrating on 7x8-foot rooms, making them beautifully livable.

And So Victoria, in Miniature

TRAILERS with Victorian and Colonial decor are among her achievements. These have braided rugs, old-fashioned rockers, and milk-glass lamps. She has also done some trailers in Chinese with brilliant colors and handsome figurines. However, she believes most trail-dwellers prefer good modern. It's more in tune with their carefree, uncluttered way of life.

We've come a long way from the old gypsy days, though, says Mrs. Staley. Lots of today's trailerites are retired people who want a really nice home that can be moved as the seasons change. Even more are travelling construction workers who need a comfortable house for their families near their current work.

Besides doing a standard decorating job on trailers as they leave the factory, Mrs. Staley acts as consultant for people who want something extra special for their pint-sized homes.

Oriental Rug Formed Keynote

AN ORIENTAL rug and appliqued quilts were the keynote for a trailer she recently finished for a Chicago couple. They gave up their big Chicago house, with its cares and obligations, yet wanted to keep a few treasured possessions. Mrs. Staley built the color scheme for their trailer decor about these. The couple now live in Florida on a large lot renting for $150 a year, have a patio with awning, tables, and chairs, beside the trailer.

Reason for using color in trailer interiors is that walls are nearly always natural wood and rooms need brightening, says Mrs. Staley. Paint and wallpaper are seldom used because they're likely to crack and peel in transit.

Windsor blue, white, and deep red are used in a pretty, Staley-decorated trailer in the Armory show. Livingroom couch and draperies are blue-and-white Toile, the carpeting red, one lamp shaded in red satin and another of milk glass. The pictures, framed in red velvet, were expensive, but Mrs. Staley thinks knick-knacks should be extra nice in a small place.

The ultra-modern kitchen has a red and white color scheme, and wonderful cross ventilation. Beyond is the bedroom with a quilted chintz spread of deep red with white and red flounce and matching draperies.

Mary Haworth's Mail

After 40 Years' Exemplary Marriage, Man Wins Job Promotion and Becomes Infatuated With a Girl Co-worker; Now His Wife Is Very Worried

DEAR MARY HAWORTH: My husband and I were married 40 years ago, when he was 24 and I was 19 years old. We have reared five fine children, all now happily married; our home is paid for, and as we come of poor families we have worked hard all our lives, and we have loved and trusted each other always.

However, things have changed since Cal was promoted to a responsible supervisory job where he deals with many people. I noticed almost at once that he would sit by the hour moodily looking into space, and that he took no interest in our home any more.

It worried me for a long time, and when I asked if he were ill, or if I were at fault, and if we could talk things over to see what was wrong, he replied that he didn't want to talk about things, that I wasn't at fault, and that I was a good, kind, loving wife who had always been loyal to him.

Should She Take Spite Vacation?

WELL, at last the bombshell exploded. About a month ago a friend of his told me that he is having an affair with a girl in his office, who flatters him, tells him how wonderful he is, how sorry she is when things go wrong for him at the office, etc., and that Cal buys her flowers, candy, and gifts and even went to the hospital to see her, and is being seen with her constantly.

I asked Cal if this were true and he said it was, which is about to break my heart. My patience is wearing thin, but I certainly don't want to give up my home and my husband. I pleaded with him, tried to point out the fine man he's been until this awful thing happened, and told him he isn't using good judgment in letting it get the better of him.

Tell me, why do some men behave like this in their late years? How can they see a house of happiness fall to pieces? Will you please answer soon, as I am about to take a vacation for a little while, in the hope it will bring him to his senses. Am I wrong in making every effort to keep my home and my husband's love which is rightfully mine? I will abide by your advice. V. C.

Man's Unsteadied by His Promotion

DEAR V. C.: Each man who acts like this, at any age, has his own set of motives for doing so, and one man's motives wouldn't fit another man's case, so there is no use laboring that question in general terms.

I surmise that Cal's promotion had much to do with his going of the tracks, and that it affected his psychology in two ways. I daresay that he felt deeply anxious in taking over greater responsibilities at his "late" age, and consequently was ripe to accept emotional support in the circumstances, provided by some special advocate familiar with his executive problems.

Also it is probable that the promotion brought him a boost in pay that allowed a margin for luxury spending for the first time in his working experience. Hence in these dovetailing respects, the stage would be set for romantic entanglement with an office adventuress, if one happened to be in the neighborhood.

Keep Clear Head, Stand by Husband

THE BRAND of favors and attentions the girl is accepting suggests that she isn't burdened by ethical scruples in the relationship, and that she may have gone out of her way to secure his interest and win his patronage, by capitalizing on his hunger for reassurance in his new job.

When Cal sits staring into space for hours, he is groping through a fog composed of emotional conflict between vagrant impulse and devotion to wife, bewilderment at his philandering, and muddled longing for a second Springtime of life, I suppose. And inasmuch as he has lost his bearings for the present, it is your loyal duty to keep a clear head, stay on hand and take no vacations until the storm on the horizon blows itself out.

It were foolish to flounce off like jealous sixteen; or to feel that you have to use tactics to defend your wifely status. Just be yourself as usual, abide with your husband protectively during his season of confusion, take verbal pokes at the girl if you feel so moved—and there's nothing she can do to seriously damage the personal relationship forged in 40 years' fine fruitful teamwork. M. H.

Nation's Top Guest List at Truman Dinner for Shah

By Elizabeth Maguire

HIS Imperial Majesty Mohammad Reza Shah Pahlavi dined last evening with the President and Mrs. Truman. The company included highest officials of the land, the Ambassador of Iran Hussein Ala, and other prominent Iranians.

Dinner was at 8 o'clock in the Carlton Room of the Carlton Hotel. A lighted fountain was placed in the center of the U-shaped table. Trailing fern edged the tables and centerpieces were made up of white, yellow and bronze pompons. Musial selections were played by a section of the Marine Band orchestra.

At 7:45 the guests began to arrive. They walked through a lobby filled with spectators and flashing cameras.

Mrs. Clark Clifford and the Special Counsel to the President came in with the Assistant Secretary of State and Mrs. George V. Allen. Mrs. Clifford wore strapless black bouffant and Mrs. Allen was in wine velvet. Mrs. George McGhee was a picture in gray satin and ermine. Mrs. John Steelman's fur jacket covered a pink tulle dress with a full skirt of tiny ruffles. When the Secretary of State and Mrs. Dean Acheson walked in, everyone rose to applaud.

The President and Mrs. Truman arrived just ten minutes before 8 o'clock, coming in by a private entrance off the dining room. Other guests entered by the front door to the hotel and assembled in the reception room, where they were greeted by the President and Mrs. Truman before going into dinner.

At the end of the reception the President took Mrs. Vinson in to dinner and Mrs. Truman went in with the Shah of Iran. The orchestra played ruffles and flourishes and the guests were seated by 8:15 p. m. Mrs. Truman was gowned in black velvet for the occasion.

Menu List Varied Courses

The menu started with appetizers—celery, olives and salted almond—and Vichyssoise soup. This was followed by brook trout and potatoes, and a third course of roast lamb, endives and artichokes. The salad course was a tossed salad, called Salade President, and for dessert there was souffle Rothschild. Coffee, liqueurs, cigars and cigarettes completed the dinner.

Vin Chablis was served with the fish course and with the meat, Burgundy. Charles Heidsieck Champagne Brut was served with the salad and dessert.

Shah Doesn't Corner All D. C. Glamour

By Marie McNair

NOT all the glamour and the glitter shone on the Shah of Iran yesterday.

There were a dozen parties going on around the town for visitors, an artist, a bride-to-be.

Mrs. Norman Makin, wife of the Australian Ambassador, gave a tea yesterday at the embassy "for ladies only," asking 150 or more of her friends from 3:30 to 5 p. m.

Mrs. D. J. Munro, wife of the First Secretary of the Australian Embassy; Mrs. D. S. Graham, wife of the Civil Air Attache, and Mrs. T. C. Bell, wife of the Scientific Attache, took their turns at the tea table.

In the group of guests were Mrs. Harold Burton, Mrs. Nelson Johnson, Mrs. Gordon Young, Mrs. Wilmot Donald Matthews, Mrs. James Murray, Mme. Rybar, Mrs. Arthur Vennell, Mrs. W. D. Whittemore, Mrs. George C. Thorpe, Mrs. Vincent Burke and Mrs. Duncan Phillips.

New Marshal Feted

GEN. AND MRS. CARL SPAATZ had a few guests in for cocktails in honor of Lady Slessor, wife of Air Chief Marshal Sir John Slessor, who is slated to succeed Lord Tedder as head of the Royal Air Force in January. Lady Slessor, who has been in this country for several weeks, has been visiting on the Eastern Shore.

The Turkish Ambassador and Mme. Erkin were among the guests at the buffet supper given by the Press Attache of the Turkish Embassy and Mme. Baba last night. Also there were the Director of Turkish Information in New York, Nuri Eren and Mme. Eren, son-in-law and daughter of the hosts.

Artist Is Focus

THEN there was the dinner party given by the Agriculture Attache of the Spanish Embassy and Mme. Echegaray. The Ecuadorian Ambassador and Senora de Dillon were ranking guests.

Virginia Goolkasian's portrait of Mme. Thors in a white low-cut gown held all eyes at the party given by the wife of the Icelandic Minister for the artist yesterday.

A student for several years at the Boston School of Fine Arts, Miss Goolkasian paints in oils, has turned out numerous pen-and-ink sketches and equally fine pastels.

In the downstairs recreation room at the Icelandic Legation, she had arranged a series of sketches of the Washington Cathedral, the Capitol and even some of the animals at the zoo.

Conductor Honored

MRS. Rudolph Stanley-Brown entertained at supper at her home on 32d st. after the National Symphony Orchestra concert last evening in honor of the symphony conductor, Howard Mitchell and Mrs. Mitchell, and Mr. and Mrs. Leonard Shure. Mr. Shure was piano soloist with the orchestra.

Mrs. Clarence Norton Goodwin was hostess at the Inter-American Conference dinner held at the Mayflower last night. She will be hostess at luncheon today for another group who are here for the two-day meeting of the conference, sponsored by the United States Inter-American Council.

Mrs. Spruille Braden, here from New York to hear her husband speak at the dinner, was at Mrs. Goodwin's table. Others were Mrs. Robert H. Jackson, Senora de Ileras, Senora de Mora, Mme. Thor Thors, Mrs. Wayne Morse, Mrs. Leslie Biffle. Mrs. James Kemper of Chicago, who was also a dinner speaker; Mrs. David Stowe and Mrs. Kirkwood Donovan.

Miss Larkin Feted

MISS VIRGINIA LARKIN, daughter of Major Gen. and Mrs. Thomas Larkin, and her fiance, Hugh McCann, Counselor of the Legation of Ireland, were guests of honor at a cocktail party yesterday given by bachelors Eamonn Kennedy, First Secretary of the Irish Legation, and Sean Hayden, Counselor, who have a house together on Chesterfield place.

General and Mrs. Larkin were at the party and other guests were the Irish Minister, Sean Nunan, without Mrs. Nunan, who is ill; the Counselor of the Irish Legation, Joseph D. Brennan; the Commercial Counselor of the Canadian Embassy and Mrs. John English, the Commercial Secretary of South African Embassy and Mrs. W. A. Horrocks; Vascos Tigre of the Brazilian Embassy and Mme. Vascos Tigre, Mr. and Mrs. George Lawrence, Mr. and Mrs. Wayne Jackson, Garner Rennie, Dr. and Mrs. W. F. O'Donnell, Ed Dickinson and Mr. and Mrs. William R. Sweeney.

Honors Paul Jolles

FRIENDS of Paul Jolles were invited yesterday to the Swiss Legation by the Minister and Mrs. Bruggmann for cocktails from 6 to 8 p. m.

It was a farewell to the very popular attache who is leaving today to return to Berne. The handsome rooms of the legation were filled to overflowing with the many friends Mr. Jolles has made in his several years in Washington.

Tuning Up for Lohengrin

Bride-Elect of Veep Offers Friends a Peep at Trousseau

St. Louis, Nov. 16 (U.P.).—Mrs. Carleton S. Hadley, bride-to-be of Vice President Alben W. Barkley, today held an impromptu trousseau preview for girls from offices where she had worked.

The attractive 38-year-old widow, who will marry the "Veep" here Friday, thought first of her friends of typing and shorthand days when she decided to make known her choice of wedding clothing to a chosen few.

Guests at the affair, held at the home of Mrs. T. M. Sayman, were fellow-workers at Wabash Railroad and Washington University. The invitations enabled them to visit the scene of Mrs. Hadley's wedding luncheon as well as to view her trousseau.

Employed as Secretary

Mrs. Hadley formerly was employed in the romance language department of Washington University and later became secretary to Chancellor Arthur H. Compton. More recently she has been employed as a secretary in the legal department at Wabash.

Friends said that Mrs. Hadley, who has been staying at the Sayman home since she was released from the hospital after an attack of flu, has been busy with alterations and fittings since Sunday. She made the final selection of her wedding dress from the Stix, Baer & Fuller department store here then, it was learned.

The public at large must wait until the wedding to see the bridal gown, however. Mrs. Hadley prefers not to disclose its design until then. Her friends respected her wishes.

Will Resume Rounds

Tomorrow she will resume her busy round of preparations for the wedding, visiting the hairdresser and greeting early arrivals among Barkley's relatives.

The ceremony will take place at 11 a. m. (CST) in the Singleton Memorial Chapel of St. John's Methodist Church. Bishop Ivan Lee Holt will officiate, and will be assisted by the Rev. Albea Godbold, pastor of the church. The only guests will be members of the immediate families of the bride and groom and the Vice President's civilian aide, William Vaughn.

The bride-elect's brother, William W. Rucker of West Palm Beach, Fla., will arrive tomorrow morning. He will escort Mrs. Hadley to the altar.

David M. Barkley of Paducah, Ky., who will serve as his father's best man, and his family will motor t St. Louis tomorrow as will other Paducah relatives of the Vice President.

Under the Wire

Success Is Whimsical, Finds Mrs. Hugo Black; 'Peace' Pipe Joins Ching Collection

By Mary Van Rensselaer Thayer

THE CORCORAN GALLERY is about to stage its annual exhibition of paintings executed by "Artists of Washington and Vicinity." Amongst the pictures "hung" is one painted by Mrs. Hugo Black, wife of the Associate Justice of the Supreme Court.

Mrs. Black, a rank novice as artist, began taking painting lessons some four years ago. She had a terrible time at first and on one occasion complained to the teacher, "I just can't get this head straight." He replied peevishly, "You draw worse than anyone I've ever seen!"

Not at all discouraged, Mrs. B. continued her work, improving so much that this year she decided to enter a picture just to see if it would be accepted by the gallery's "hanging committee." She chose the effort she liked best and fussed no end about finding a suitable frame.

Then, just as the entry list was about to close, she discovered that she was entitled to submit two paintings. She rushed home, selected a painting she didn't care much about but which she had been told was "good," went into her attic, found a frame, stuffed the canvas into it and returned it to the gallery just under the wire.

You guessed it! The first painting didn't make the grade, the second did, incongruous frame and all!

New Style Peace Pipe

EVERYONE KNOWS that Cyrus Ching, Director of the Federal Mediation and Conciliation Service, collects pipes of all kinds. He owns scores, smokes them all according to whim provided the pipestem is curved.

Recently a new number has been added to the Ching collection which might subtly help in the new coal strike maneuvers headlined yesterday: "Ching's Visit Today to White House May Indicate Stronger Action for Settlement."

The pipe, a sixth wedding anniversary present from Mrs. Ching, is very fine briar, its bowl carved as a skull complete with sunken eye sockets and lipless grin.

Those who've glimpsed this treasure feel Mr. C. should keep it with him these days and when too harassed by John L. Lewis, slip it out of pocket and light up.

Slips Off Astral Plane

LESSER IMMORTALS imagine that such military immortals as make up the Joint Chiefs of Staff operate on an astral plane, dealing only in vast strategic plans involving billions of dollars.

But such is not always the case. They're far from ivory-towerish and on occasion settle some very tiny unexpected problems.

One day Gen. Omar Bradley, chairman of the Joint Chiefs of Staff, was long-distanced from a small Southern town, the native habitat of a Senator he much admired. When he picked up the receiver a completely unknown and very worried voice quavered: "You're paid to give military advice, aren't you, General Bradley?"

When the general calmly answered in the affirmative, his caller continued: "Well, sir, I need military advice! I understand the atom bomb has a radius of 3½ miles. Now my house happens to be just 3 miles from the railroad station. Do you advise me to move?"

Ask Anne

Recipe for Beef a la Stroganoff

Will you please reprint the recipe for "Beef Stroganoff" from an issue of Parade about 2½ or three years ago? J. N.

BEEF A LA STROGANOFF

2½ pounds lean beef cut in strips
½ cup butter or margarine
1¼ cups chopped onions
2¼ cups sliced mushrooms
¾ cup tomato juice
2 cups water or stock
2/3 cup sherry
¼ cup sour cream
salt, pepper

Roll beef in flour; saute in butter 5 minutes and place in a hot baking dish. Saute onions in same butter until soft; place on beef and add mushrooms. Pour tomato juice, stock, and sherry over meat; season and bake in a moderate oven, 375 degrees F., 30 minutes or until meat is tender.

Serve on toast or rice and top with sour cream. Yield, 4 to 6 portions.

Can you tell me please if it is possible to remove perspiration stains from a dress, and, if not, whether dyeing the dress a darker color would do away with the stains? W. G.

If the color has been removed by the stain, it cannot be restored. If, however, the color has been only changed, it is sometimes possible to return it to the original by holding in the fumes from an open ammonia bottle. Dampen the stain with water before holding it over the bottle or sponge the stain with water to which a little ammonia has been added. If it is an old stain you might also try sponging with white vinegar.

If this doesn't remove the stain you can do it by dyeing the dress a darker color. Before you apply the dye, wash the stained area well with mild soap and lukewarm water. Rinse thoroughly.

My friends tell me that I make an excellent fudge; some of them, however, say that it is a little too sweet although I make it exactly according to the recipe. Can you tell me of something I may use that will take some of the sweetness out of it? G. F. B.

Does your recipe call for salt? The addition of salt to fudge removes the extremely sweet flavor and brings out the flavor of the chocolate. Add one-half teaspoon of salt to the average recipe calling for two cups of sugar.

Another way to lessen the sweetness would be to increase the chocolate. Using two cups of sugar, you could increase the chocolate to as much as four squares.

I have a pair of white plaster of Paris lamps that need freshening. I understand they should be calcimined. Could you please tell me how to mix the calcimine so that it sticks and doesn't come off in powder form? A. A.

It seems to me that either bleaching the lamps or painting them with an oil paint would be the best way to freshen them.

A bleach which will remove soil, stains, and discolorations is oxalic acid. Use one ounce oxalic acid to a quart of water and brush it on the lamp base. Leave it on for a minute or two and rinse thoroughly with clear water. Repeat the application, if necessary.

If you feel that bleaching will not be enough to freshen the lamp bases, then paint them with a good grade of oil paint such as a quick-drying enamel. Oil paint will give a hard, durable finish which will not rub off.

Please tell me the best way to put perfume on a letter when sending to a man, without smearing it all over the paper, which makes spots. L. M.

Place some of your perfume on a piece of cotton and inclose it in your stationary box. In a few days the paper will have absorbed enough of the odor to give it a lovely fragrance. Or, you could place a sachet in the box of writing paper.

Would you advise changing the color of a white nylon blouse? It seems such a dead white. K. B.

Nylon does not absorb moisture readily—a characteristic which makes it dry quickly but which also makes it difficult to dye. You may be able to tint the blouse a pastel color, but the color would have to be renewed from time to time. Use one of the commercial dyes which are recommended for use on nylon and follow directions which come with the product you use.

To J. M. A. and H. J. S. both of Washington who have asked about removing paint from nylon:

Try this: Rub lard or colorless vasoline into the stain to soften. Let stand for an hour or so, rubbing occasionally between the hands during the softening period. When softened, put an absorbent pad under the stain and sponge with carbon tetrachloride. Continue sponging as long as any paint is removed. The entire process may be repeated if you think additional paint can be removed.

If the paint color is not completely removed, use a bleach such as the color remover which is sold where dyes are sold. This can be applied by dampening the stain and sprinkling the powdered color remover on it or by making the color remover into a solution with water and sponging it on the stain. Mix in the proportion of two teaspoonfuls to a pint of water.

Broken Windows, Gunfire Mark Racial Tension in N. E.

More broken windows and a shotgun blast have figured in the newest outcropping of racial tension in the River Terrace area.

Police said George Butler, 32, a Negro, admitted he fired his shotgun Tuesday night after someone threw a rock through a window of his house at 330 34th st. ne.

Butler appeared voluntarily yesterday for a hearing in Municipal Court before Assistant Corporation Counsel Phillip Brophy.

After a five-minute hearing Brophy informed Butler no charges would be pressed but reminded him it is against the law to discharge firearms in the District.

Butler told Brophy he did not see anyone outside the window, that he fired the shotgun to frighten away persons who might be there.

Butler is the second Negro to be subjected to acts of annoyance since moving into the white neighborhood.

Another Negro, Odis Von Blasingame, has been plagued since he and his family moved into a house, at 3303 Ames st. ne., last April. This is about three blocks from the Butler house.

Brophy said that Butler, a custodian at Lafayette School, told him he cleaned up the house last Friday, preparatory to moving in.

Butler said when he returned Saturday he found 30 panes of glass shattered. He, his wife, his four children, his sister-in-law, brother-in-law and another relative moved in anyway.

Then, Butler told Brophy, another window was shattered by a rock Tuesday night and he fired his shotgun.

Spanking Held No Guarantee Of Lawfulness

The most frequently spanked child does not necessarily grow up to be the most law-abiding, Dr. Leopold E. Wexberg, director of the District's Department of Health Bureau of Mental Hygiene, said last night.

Wexberg, in the final lecture of a series for parents, on the subject of children, sponsored by the Washington Ethical Society, said child psychologists endeavored to make children law-abiding "since we live in a society that is governed by laws."

Wexberg said "the most law-abiding are those who feel secure in the love of their families.

"You might expect the child most frequently punished would become the most law-abiding, but this is not always the case, because the child is in rebellion."

Describing the growth of the child's awareness of law, Wexberg said "the law is represented for the child by his parents. A child accepts parental authority and identifies himself with it, and in time it becomes a part of his conscience."

More than 250 persons attended the lecture, held in the Friends Meeting House auditorium, 2111 Florida ave. nw.

Fire Dispatcher Helps Neighbor As House Burns

The Robert Bailey family of 2820 Covington rd., Silver Spring, Md., found a handy neighbor yesterday in William H. Ward.

When a fire was discovered in an upstairs bedroom of the Bailey home shortly before 2 p. m., 5-year-old Billy Bailey dashed across the street to Ward's home. Ward, a dispatcher for the Silver Spring Volunteer Fire Department, put in a rush call for fire engines.

Mrs. Bailey tried to salvage some valuables while her son ran for help. However, one bedroom was reduced to a shell and two others suffered lesser damage.

Enka Corp. Sues To Get Patent on 'Thread' Slogan

The American Enka Corp. sued yesterday in District Court to get the Commissioner of Patents to register its trademark containing the slogan, "The Fate of a Fabric Hangs by a Thread."

The company contends that the Patent Office refused to register the trademark because under its present practice, slogans are not registerable.

Enka says that the action is a deprivation of its property without due process. The slogan is associated in the minds of the public with the Enka rayon fabrics, the suit says.

Asks the boy, "Why did my daddy have to die?"

War Widow Seeks Answer To Anti-Racial Beating of Son

Lynn, Mass., Nov. 16 (AP).—A war widow in an open letter today pleaded with the world to give her the right answer for her 11-year-old son's question, "Why did my Daddy have to die?"

Mrs. E. Sylvia Goldstein, widow of Maurice Goldstein, who died with the Second Armored Infantry, Forty-first Division on November 20, 1944, wrote the Lynn Item:

"On Wednesday evening, November 9, my 11-year-old son, Laurence, was waylaid by several large boys. These boys insulted, spat, beat and kicked my son into the gutter because he was, as they sneeringly said: 'A Jew.'

"Ironically enough my son was coming home from a Boy Scout meeting—a meeting at which one of the watchwords, I believe, is: 'A Scout is reverent, he is reverent toward others, he is faithful in his religious duties and respects the convictions of others in matters of custom and religion.'

"Maybe if he had run away he would have been spared a beating. But, being the son of a veteran, killed in the service of his country, he could do no less than stick it out against unfair odds and strike out against injustice, even as his father did before him.

"Perhaps if such incidents were brought to the attention of the public there would be fewer heartbreaks, like the one I mention. Maybe then, too, I would know the right answer to give my son when he asks: 'Why did my Daddy have to die?'"

The item said the mother had not reported the incident to the police but that the paper had and the local chapter of B'Nai B'rith was investigating the matter.

D. C. Junior Bar Gets Award Today

A national award of merit will be presented to the junior bar section of the District Bar Association at a 12 o'clock luncheon today at the Annapolis Hotel.

The award was won by the Washington group at the meeting of the American Bar Association, in September at St. Louis, in competition with other State affiliated groups, and is for excellence in bar association activities in 1948-49.

W. Carloss Morris of Houston, Tex., national chairman of the Junior Bar Conference, American Bar Association, will make the presentation.

Taft Act to Be Discussed

Gerald Morgan, attorney, will speak on "How the Taft-Hartley Act Benefits the Employer" at a 6:30 p. m. dinner meeting today of the Washington Personnel Association in the Mayflower. Morgan, as special counsel in 1947 for the House Labor Committee, helped draft the act.

Dr. Dub to Lecture

Dr. Leonard Dub, a Washington psychiatrist, will give his second lecture in the parent-child relationship institute sponsored by the Jewish Community Center at 8:30 p. m. today. Dr. Dub will speak on "Personality Development in Adolescence."

D. C. Gets $550,000 For Housing Plans

President Truman yesterday approved preliminary loans totaling $20,375,400 for low-rent housing programs for Washington and 107 other cities.

The District received $550,000 to plan construction of 4000 housing units over the next two years, the Alexandria Redevelopment and Housing Authority received $85,000 for preliminary study for 250 units, and Baltimore was awarded $650,000 for 5000.

The loans are the first to be made under the Administration's new six-year program to build 810,000 public-housing units. Funds for actual construction will be granted after local authorities prepare detailed plans and cost estimates.

Sites of the projects will not be determined until surveys are completed. John Ihlder, director of National Capital Housing Authority, said in Boston yesterday:

"NCHA expects to . . . utilize sites in congested areas, sparsely occupied areas and vacant areas."

The President's action was announced by John T. Egan, Commissioner of the Public Housing Administration.

He said the planning fund allocation would permit the local authorities throughout the country to take the first concrete step toward building "good new homes" for about half a million persons in low-income families.

In the District, the Commissioners' formal approval of a so-called cooperative agreement between the city government and the Federal Housing Agncy is the last remaining policy detail awaiting action.

By agreement the District would pledge itself to raze the number of existing substandard family units equal to the dwellings constructed under the Federal program.

Chicago led the list of cities with 21,000 dwellings proposed. New York was second with 20,300.

Senator Burned; 'Nothing Serious'

Associated Press WIREPHOTO

SEN. KENNETH D. McKELLAR (D., Tenn.), who will be 80 next year, is pictured last night in a Memphis hospital after suffering burns when he slipped into a tub of hot water in his hotel bathroom. He told newsmen his burns were more painful than serious. He burned his left arm and shoulder and part of his left thigh

Mother Takes Dog in Divorce At Frederick

Frederick, Md., Nov. 16—A unique divorce settlement, in which the foster father was awarded the custody of a child and the latter's mother was awarded the custody of a dog, was revealed here today when Associate Judge Patrick M. Schnauffer filed a lengthy opinion and decree in Equity Court.

By the decree, Mrs. Mary Frances Erwin, formerly of Washington, D. C., and now residing near Jefferson, Md., was awarded the custody of the dog, Scipio of Dornwald, stud at her shepherd kennels ,as well as an absolute divorce.

The dog was a lone bone of contention in the proceedings, the court declared.

Delbert B. Erwin, whose business address was listed as 409 11th st. nw., Washington, was awarded the custody of Mrs. Erwin's 14-year-old daughter, Patricia. Mrs. Erwin did not ask alimony and abandoned her request for custody of her daughter.

Florida Man Held Here on '47 Charge Of Stabbing Wife

Alert work by a fugitive squad detective sergeant yesterday resulted in the arrest of a St. Petersburg, Fla., man who allegedly stabbed his wife 66 times there in 1947.

Detective Serg. J. J. Peters, acting on information obtained at 10 a. m. from the St. Petersburg police, picked up Virgil Kepley, 33, in his 918 H st. nw. rooming house by noon.

Kepley, who had been working here as a counter man in a hamburger shop, offered no resistance, and told police he was ready to go back and face the music.

D. C. Sales Tax Filing Deadline Extended 1 Day

The deadline for filing District sales and use tax returns this month has been extended one day because November 20 falls on a Sunday.

Sales Tax Administrator Allan F. Brooke ruled yesterday that whenever the last day for filing falls on a Sunday or legal holiday the deadline shall go over to the next day.

However, if the twentieth should fall on a Saturday—a day when the District Building is closed to business—returns must be filed on the preceding Friday, Brooke said.

10,000 Attend Mission Service At Cathedral

More than 10,000 persons attended the first three services of the Bryan Green Mission at the Washington Cathedral, officials of the Episcopal Diocese of Washington said yesterday.

Estimates placed attendance at 4000 on Sunday, 3000 Monday and 3300 Tuesday, according to the Rev. Harold Bend Sedgwick, of St. Thomas' Church and chairman of arrangements for the mission.

The mission will continue through Monday, with services each night at 8 p. m.

Downstairs chapels and nearby St. Alban's Church have been wired for sound, Mr. Sedgwick said, and urges that those who cannot find seats listen to the mission there.

County Breeders to Meet

The Montgomery County Holstein-Friesian Breeders Association will hold a dinner meeting Tuesday at 6:30 p. m. at the Epworth Methodist Church, Gaithersburg.

Sharp Rise in Measles Cases Reported Here

The District Health Department yesterday reported a sharp increase during the last 10 days in the number of measles cases here.

Dr. C. C. Dauer, director of the department's Bureau of Preventable Diseases, said 15 cases were reported last week as compared to six in the same week for 1948. Eleven cases had been reported this week as of last night, he said.

Shopping Area Debated By Fairfax County Board

A 44-acre business section will spring up at the intersection of Shirley hwy. and Seminary rd. in Fairfax County—provided the county supervisors give the nod.

At yesterday's day-long meeting, they held a public hearing on their own application to rezone the property from general business district to suburban residence district. Present policy is that no business districts be set up on Shirley hwy.

Back in 1946, the supervisors approved the application of Mark Winkler, Washington builder and the would-be developer, for a business district at Seminary rd. on the then unfinished highway. Under present policy, however, they have moved to return the land to residential use only.

Winkler, through Attorney Hardee Chambliss, told the supervisors he would erect a full-fledged business district at the intersection, containing department stores, office buildings, and so on. It would not be a shopping center, he asserted.

Located a mile and a half from the Shirlington shopping center, it would be aproximately three times as large, he said. It would serve an estimated 80,000 residents within a three-mile radius.

Wallace Carper, chairman of the board of supervisors, said at conclusion of the hearing that he opposed business districts along the highway. The supervisors then took their own application under study.

Construction of a sub-trunk sewer to serve the Willston apartment project at Seven Corners, to be paid for by Standard Construction Co., the project's developer, was approved by the supervisors.

Under terms of the contract, the company will pay an estimated $65,000 for the sewer. The county will then lease it, and from rentals pay back the cost of the sewer to the company.

In other business yesterday, the supervisors:

Referred to the county planning commission the proposal of Fort Belvoir officials to have 350 low-cost housing units constructed on the fort off Dogue Creek on the Mount Vernon side. An area of about 20 acres is involved.

The supervisors agreed they would indorse the commission's efforts to forestall the project and have the land brought under county supervision for recreational purposes.

Noted a letter from the New Alexandria Citizens' Association announcing a "test poll" to determine the wishes of community residents as to annexation to Alexandria. The poll will be taken at 8 p. m. December 1 in the community.

One on the Aisle—

Reporter O'Keefe Assists the Cops

By Richard L. Coe

WHEN IT COMES to rugged pillars of righteousness, it seems to me Dennis O'Keefe has it over the rest of the boys. Dennis is now busting up the baby adoption racket in "Abandoned," at Keith's, an effective melodrama of the semi-documentary sort.

O'Keefe is a movie star who seems to go his way without the flubdub that surrounds the screen's other buster-uppers. Alan Ladd, when he gets on a case, never cracks a smile, and despite his winging battles always seems to me on the fragile side. Dick Powell's ability to mess up the lawbreakers and Howard Duff's prowess have an air of good, clean fun. And I'm always afraid William Powell is going to break an arm.

Dennis, though, looks pretty indestructible. My good book doesn't say how old the guy is, I suppose about 40, though he could pass for a healthy 28. He's got an Irish sort of face, not exactly handsome, but good-humored. His parents were a vaudeville team and Dennis spent five years as a movie extra before plunging into a curious career that's kept him working steadily but never in million-buck epics. Considering that Randy Scott never gets out of the Old West, Dennis seems the least likely of movie heroes to be foiled by the tough guys that pepper all Hollywood melodramas.

In "Abandoned," Dennis is one of those newspaper reporters who leads the charmed life dear to the hearts of script-I-was-a-newspaperman-myself-once-writers. In the Los Angeles police headquarters he comes across a girl from the East who's looking for her sister. With that rapid derring-do movie reporters have, Dennis gets on the trail of a baby-adopting racket that involves such tawdry folk as Raymond Burr, Mike Mazurki, Will Kuluva and Marjorie Rambeau, as the social-looking front for their evil.

"ABANDONED." Universal-International release produced by Jerry Bresler. Story and dialogue by Irwin Gielgud, added dialogue by William Bowers. Photographed by William Daniels. Directed by Joe Newman. Music by Anonymous. At RKO-Keith's.

The hows of breaking up the gang are revealed pretty much according to formula, but it's still interesting to watch the police get to work once the reporter has proved he's got a case. The lines are crisp, the naturalistic settings help and, despite some lapses, the plot flows along naturally.

All this is right up O'Keefe's alley, much as it's been in his recent forays in behalf of United States Government departments. He handles his lines briskly, even the traditional boy-girl stuff, but the best thing about him is that he looks as though he could lick any guy in sight.

Oh yes, the Keith screen also offers a weird little adventure with some kind of long-snouted, bear-like creatures adrift on a yacht. What they're called I'm not sure, but they're good fun.

2nd National, C. & S. Bank Vote Extras

By S. Oliver Goodman

Two more Washington banks yesterday announced extra dividends for the yearend.

Second National Bank will pay an extra of 2 percent ($1) a share on capital stock, in addition to the regular quarterly dividend of 2 percent. The dividends are payable December 30 to stock of record December 20.

Bank of Commerce & Savings voted an extra of $1 a share, in addition to the regular quarterly dividend of $2.50 a capital share, payable December 31 to stock of record December 20.

John A. Reilly, president of Second National, pointed out that the two dividends for the last quarter will bring total disbursements to 10 percent this year as compared with 9½ percent last year. This is the largest dividend total since the bank doubled its capital structure in January, 1947. Reilly also stated that the institution's net earnings for the first nine months this year "were the most impressive in its 77-year-history." Last month, a bonus equal to one month's salary was authorized for all officers and employes.

Thomas J. Groom, president of Bank of Commerce & Savings, noted that this year's dividends will total $12 a share, unchanged from last year. He added that the bank's directors had authorized a Christmas bonus of one month's salary to staff members.

Also, directors of the Commerce & Savings institution approved the transfer of $100,000 from undivided profits to surplus account. The accounts now show $300,000 capital and $700,000 surplus.

More good news for local stockholders came yesterday from National Mortgage & Investment Corp., which declared a dividend of 30 cents a share on preferred stock arrears, payable December 15 to stock of record November 30.

FORD PRICES: The 1950 Ford will sell here at the same prices as the 1949 models, it was reported unofficially. The company today is announcing details of the new models, but has not publicly announced prices. There are many styling and mechanical improvements, but no startling changes. For the first time, a coat of arms will appear on the front of the hood and center of the trunk lid.

WHO'S WHO TODAY: Jack Wilder, formerly of St. Louis, has been appointed sales manager of the Hotel Statler here, succeeding Edward T. Doty who resigned to become manager of the Hermitage Hotel in Nashville. Wilder started in the hotel business at the Raleigh Hotel here in 1931 . . . Fred D. Wilson is the new president of Capehart-Farnsworth Corp., succeeding Ellery W. Stone, who was appointed to head Capehart at the time it was acquired by International Telephone & Telegraph Corp. . . .

AVOIDS NEW YORK TAX: The Alabama-Tennessee Natural Gas Co., whose stock is widely distributed in the Washington area, yesterday announced appointment of the Liberty National Bank as its transfer agent and Riggs National Bank as registrar. The move was viewed as an effort to avoid the New York State security transfer tax of $3 a 100 shares, which has been criticized by out-of-State brokers as unfair to investors in other areas.

PONTIAC PARLEY: More than 500 regional Pontiac dealers and members of their staffs will meet in the Shoreham Hotel today to preview the 1950 Pontiac models scheduled to go on public display November 25. Conducting the meeting will be Dan O'Madigan, jr., assistant general sales manager of Pontiac Motor Division, assisted by Washington Zone Manager C. F. Devereaux. The 1950 merchandising plans will be discussed. Devereaux said yesterday that Pontiac during 1949 expects to produce 340,000 cars, its biggest year.

PROPOSAL: The next logical step in development of trust business should be creation of an "Estate Planning Council" in Washington, Gilbert T. Stephenson said last night at a meeting of the Fiduciaries Section of the D. C. Bankers Association in the Burlington Hotel. Membership in the new group would consist of bank trust officers, life underwriters, lawyers, tax experts and accountants, Stephenson proposed. He is director of the trust research department of the Graduate School of Banking of the American Bankers Association. Presiding last night was Edward A. Dent, jr., chairman of the Fiduciaries Section.

FIFTH ANNIVERSARY: The GI home loan program is five years old today. As a sidelight, the First Federal Savings & Loan Association of Washington reported that out of 1150 such loans made by it only one has been foreclosed.

EARNINGS: Eastman Kodak Co. reported net income of $35,130,264 or $2.68 a common share for the first nine months this year, compared with $42,501,249 or $3.41 a share in the same 1948 period.

Symphony's Performance Is Brilliant

By Paul Hume

Great things are happening regularly on Wednesday nights in Constitution Hall.

There the National Symphony Orchestra can be heard every week—and the cumulative effect of fine playing of top music is rolling into a real feeling of achievement in Washington music.

Last night the news was made by Americans. Leonard Shure was piano soloist, the symphony was by Paul Creston, and Howard Mitchell conducted with absolute authority and all the brilliance appropriate to the occasion.

Shure played the first of Brahms' two pianos concertos. It is an early work in which the composer is still finding his way. Of large proportions, it pits soloist against orchestra in rhythm, volume and total effect.

Shure was tremendous. His pianism is of the most heroic mold. Few pianists can match his control of the largest resources of his instrument. Yet he never forced a note. His phrasing and outlining of the few gracious moments given the piano was exquisite.

With the most assured accompaniment from Mitchell and the orchestra the concerto overcame its tendencies to seem verbose. It won a real ovation.

Mitchell made equal excitement earlier in the evening with Paul Creston's second symphony. This is a securely written work. Full of originality in melodic matters, it is evidence of fine craft, stunning in its pair of towering climaxes.

Weber's Euryanthe, presaging so much of Wagner, opened the evening. Ravel's early Waltzes, Noble and Sentimental, were a novelty.

In reviewing the whole concert, one cannot forget the succession of brilliant moments contributed by Shure, Creston, and behind it all, Howard Mitchell. Those who might have occupied empty seats missed a memorable affair.

Next week: Jan Tomasow in works of Bach and Chausson, with a premiere by Dello Joio, and Ravel's Daphnis and Chloe.

Thanksgiving Party

Thanksgiving lends itself to "kid's" parties so very well. Perhaps it's the idea of lots to eat, perhaps it's the Indians and the Pilgrims that appeal. Whatever it is, Thanksgiving runs a close second to Christmas and Fourth of July as a favorite holiday.

Often it's primarily a family holiday. But even if no guests are invited, it's fun for the youngsters to have a party. Autumn decorations—cornstalks, pumpkins, colored leaves—are easy for children to arrange effectively. Refreshments can be simple, too. Cider, turkey sandwiches, cranberry sauce, pumpkin pie or sherbert are all special treats. They are easily prepared from the regular Thanksgiving fare.

Games with a Thanksgiving motif can be improvised, too. "Landing on Plymouth Rock" is the Thanksgiving version of Musical Chairs. Magazines serve as rocks and there is always one less than there are players. Music is played and when the music stops, the person who had no magazine on which to step is counted as falling in the water. The game goes on with another magazine removed until there are only two players and one magazine. Relay races with ears of corn to be carried from one part of the room to the other by Indians and Pilgrims can be exciting, to. And if you give the youngsters a chance they will probably figure out many other Thanksgiving-centered games.

Enlarged Service Asked on Two A. B. & W. Lines

An Interstate Commerce Commission examiner yesterday recommended enlarged passenger service on two Alexandria, Barcroft & Washington Transit Co. bus routes.

H. Lester Hooker, acting for the I.C.C., recommended an extension of service from Fairlington along Shirley hgwy. to Accotink to provide access to Fort Belvoir. He also recommended the route from Alexandria to Franconia be extended to Springfield.

Robert T. Mitchell, assistant general manager of A. B. & W., said the company is filing an application with the Virginia State Corporation Commission for extended service on the two routes. The commission's approval is also required. Mitchell said the Shirley hgwy. extension will not be put into use immediately.

The Franconia extension, he said, will be used as soon as approval is given.

Rent Rise Granted On 137 Apartments In SW Section

An 8.23 rent increase has been granted on 137 apartments at Fort Greble Apartments, Nichols ave., and Elmira st. sw., by District Rent Control Examiner James G. Tyson.

His recommended order will become final November 24 unless appeal is made to the Rent Control Administrator.

With the increase, monthly rents which ranged from $61.75 to $72.75 would be lifted to a $67 to $78.75 range. Owner L. E. Bruenginger & Sons, Inc., had asked for a 11.99 percent increase to compensate for increased operating costs and taxes.

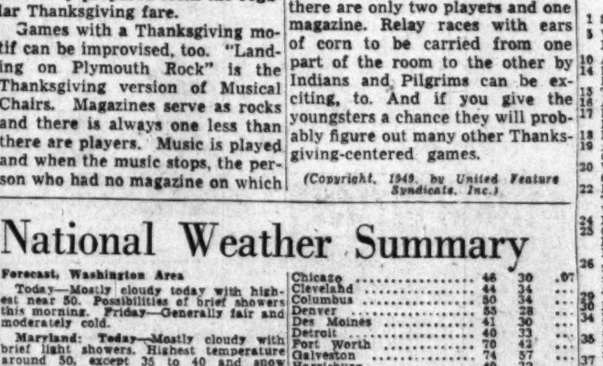
NAPOLEON



COME, COME, ELBY! WHAT'S ALL THIS NONSENSE I HEAR ABOUT YOU REFUSING TO EAT TURKEY ON THANKSGIVING? WHY IT'S THE TRADITIONAL BIRD OF THE AMERICAN TABLE! YOUR ATTITUDE'S ALMOST UNPATRIOTIC!
UNPATRIOTIC, EH? NEXT YOU'LL BE WANTING ME TO EAT AN EAGLE!
SAY, I THINK ELBY'S A BIT OFF HIS TROLLEY! HE SAYS HE'S NEVER LIKED TURKEY AND DOESN'T INTEND TO EAT IT ANYMORE ON THANKSGIVING!
TH' MAN'S MAD! MAYBE HE'S BROKE.

The Common Words

Some correspondents never seem . . . To find a better way . . . To send their many addresses . . . The things they want to say . . . They try to use the biggest words . . . That they can put in ink . . . To draw the written pictures of . . . Whatever they may think . . . It may be just a social note . . . Or else a business deal . . . In either case it does not help . . . To tell the way they feel . . . Because no person likes to get . . . A message in the mail . . . That sounds the least ambiguous . . . Or does not hit the nail . . . It is the common words that count . . . And faithfully convey . . . The thoughts and the desires that . . . We really want to say.

UNION PACIFIC RAILROAD

THE DISTRICT LINE by Bill Gold

Now All They Need Is a Quiz Show

To supplement Transit Radio's news and music, one bus driver seems to be adding a comedy routine of his own. Anthony F. Tartaro of 4708 Georgia ave. nw. reports that as his bus approached Buchanan st. the other evening, the operator called out:

"Buchanan st., folks, named after the smartest President we ever had; went into and came out of the White House a bachelor."

POVICH VS. OUR CIRCULATION DEPARTMENT

Post Carrier Boy Bob Forward of 904 Highland dr., Silver Spring, Md., levels a serious charge against Post Sports Columnist Shirley Povich. To wit:

"The Povich house is the first stop on my collection route. Shirley comes to the door and has nothing smaller than 5-dollar bills.

"I can't change a five, so I tell Shirley I'll go get some change. And I do. But when I get back, Shirley is gone and Mrs. Povich comes to the door. And all she has is a 10-spot.

"So I go to get change for a ten, and by the time I get back—you guessed it. Shirley has returned with change for the five."

Says Defendant Povich: "It's a frame-up. Why do I have to be the first stop on the kid's collection route every month?"

Regarding the reason why he never bothers to carry bills of less than $5 denomination, deponent saith not.

GIVE-AWAYS

"Three cute little 7-week-old puppies, part terrier." (Woodley 2009, but no calls between 8 and 10 a. m. please.)

"Several purebred long-haired Doberman puppies; also one black and white guinea pig." (Fairfax 800.)

"Housebroken black female kitten, 3 months old." (Randolph 8088 after 6 p. m.)

"Three-year-old half boxer, half-police dog; he's gentle and housebroken." (Falls Church 6713.)

HELD OVER BY POPULAR DEMAND

Give-Away items will continue to be a regular portion of this column, as before.

A total of 19 District Liners voted to throw out the Give-Aways. Some found them boring, some said I could put the space to better use, and some just plain hate cats.

But 487 readers thundered back that Give-Aways must be retained at all costs. And the majority rules.

Most frequently cited reason for continuing the Give-Aways was "thousands of innocent animals will be put to death if you don't help them find homes."

Another sentence that appeared in at least 50 letters was: "This is the most unselfish service I've ever seen in a newspaper. Don't stop it."

Dozens of readers said that they live in apartments where pets are not permitted, so they have no hope of ever getting a pup or a kitten from the column; yet they like to read the listings because "the little human touches they contain give them a back-home flavor."

Several of the letters contained petitions from groups in schools, offices and neighborhood clubs. Dozens added the paw-prints of pets as "signatures" to the postscript: "That goes for me, too."

Included in that pile of letters were some with a simple "Throw 'em out" or "Keep 'em in," and others with deeply appreciated words of approval for my past offerings.

I wish it were possible for me to answer each of these letters, and to tell you all ow grateful I am that you took the trouble to write. But since I can't tell you individually, permit me to say it publicly, and collectively: Thanks.

MAIL BAG

Dear Bill:

Did you see the cartoon in the American Magazine in which the husband had strung barbed wire along the shower curtain rod to prevent his wife from using it as a clothes line for her stockings?

I really got a laugh out of that one, because I've been tempted to do the same thing myself.

G. J. Winters,
4004 Beecher st. nw.

Dear Mr. Winters:

Me, too. I think it's about time architects started giving us adequate bathrooms, both as to size and number. Bill.

ADD SIGNS

The Washington Merry-Go-Round

Jimmy Roosevelt Tops a Rise

By Drew Pearson

Los Angeles.—It looks like Jimmy Roosevelt is definitely coming into his own.

Roosevelt

Once a callow youth, floundering under the weight of a famous name, Jimmy dealt with almost anybody who came along. At one time he was the political pal of Mayor James Curley of Boston. Another time, his life insurance sales to George Washington Hill of the American Tobacco Co. didn't help the Roosevelt family.

However, Jimmy is 42 now, and the years have done something to him. He has excellent political judgment. He is careful about friends. And, most important of all, he is now able to chart a straight political course. Jimmy knows what he wants and goes after it.

One of the most interesting developments about Jimmy Roosevelt is the group of youngsters around him. It is reminiscent of the Young Democrats of his father's day, the young people who would fight and die politically to defend the name of Roosevelt. Those Young Democrats of 1933 have now put on age, in some cases mold and crust. But a new generation has come along in California and their adoration of Jimmy Roosevelt is probably greater than that once given his father.

Jimmy is amazingly popular in California. When he goes into a restaurant, a political meeting or any place where people gather, the music stops, or else begins, or a whisper sweeps over the room. You can write it down that he can win the Democratic nomination for Governor in a walk, whether Truman supports him or not.

Note—The President's ire at those who supported Eisenhower before the Philadelphia convention has changed toward Mayor O'Dwyer of New York, Jack Arvey, the political boss of Chicago; Senator Douglas of Illinois and various others. His pet peeve against Jimmy Roosevelt probably results not so much from the Eisenhower incident as from his jealousy for all things Rooseveltian.

Sherman Shows Spunk

On the West Coast, where the admirals first hatched their revolt, things are a lot different now that Admiral Forrest Sherman has taken over the Navy helm. He is steering a steady course and rebellious admirals are climbing back aboard.

Sherman's policy is friendly but firm. He demonstrated that he could use an iron hand not only by abolishing Operation 23, the Navy propaganda unit, but by cracking down on another Navy propaganda nest at Pensacola, Fla. There, the Navy was even mimeographing form letters of complaint to Congressmen, then handing them out to the Congressmen's constituents to sign.

But Admiral Sherman sent his deputy, Admiral John Price, to Pensacola and stopped the smear campaign. Admiral John Reeves, in charge of the operation, is being replaced and will retire in April.

Simultaneously, Sherman showed he wasn't a yes-man by letting Capt. John Crommelin off with a sharp rebuke. This was a decision that Rear Admiral George Russell, the Navy judge advocate, urged Sherman to duck, and dump in the lap of Secretary of the Navy Matthews.

But Sherman replied: "Crommelin is under my command, and I'll take the responsibility."

The Lyons Den

By Leonard Lyons

NEW YORK.—The March of Time is preparing a 1950 reel in which some of the world's most renowned figures will predict the current of events for the next 50 years. One of the men invited by the March of Time's editors to issue statements for inclusion in this reel was G. B. Shaw . . . "It is a common mistake of editors to try to fill their magazines with interviews of prominent people," replied Shaw, "What they should do, instead, is use the money to hire young, original writers"

At the National Democratic Committee dinner in New York on December 2, there will be no dais, no guests of 'honor. The men who ordinarily would be on a dais—all the members of the Cabinet—instead will be distributed at tables throughout the banquet hall . . . The premiere of the Metropolitan Opera next Monday will be televised . . . Green, Meany, Reuther and Dubinsky sail Friday for a labor conference in London.
